arrange such a repertoire as that which has been presented at Ravinia this year. It is equally a matter of moment that three of these works—Puccini's "Anima Allegra," Smetana's "The Bartered Bride" and the fourth act of "Les Huguenots" were entirely new to the Ravinia list this year and that "Anima Allegra" ranks as a present day operatic novelty. "La Rondine," "Marouf," "La Campana Sommersa," "The Secret of Suzanne," and "La Vida Breve," all of them novelties in the true sense of the word, were again given frequent presentation during the season just closing, repeating the successes won by them last year and the year before.

Promises Fulfilled

When Mr. Eckstein issued his initial prospectus last spring, there was much in it to stimulate the interest of all those who are devoted to the art D'Angelo, Desire Defrere.

of music in its finer phases, and the season just closing has so completely fulfilled all promises made that it has not only been the most brilliant this opera house has ever enjoyed, but one of the most brilliant ever given anywhere. Mr. Eckstein brought to Ravinia a galaxy of world stars capable of interpreting the greatest operatic works in superlative manner. Most of those who were heard during the season were already well known to Ravinia patrons and all of them were on the roster throughout the entire summer period.

Splendid Presentation

In accordance with the season's first announcement, the standard repertoire has, of course, been given full consideration. But Mr. Eckstein has not contented himself with a mere presentation of these tried and true works. He has presented them with casts of such merit, and such care has been lavished upon each production, that they have been elevated to a plane quite of the ordinary. And in addition to these beloved works, without which no opera season would be complete, there has been an un-

TO SAVE YOUR EYES

THE EYE—is one of the most complex, delicate and easily injured mechanisms of the human body.

Eyeglasses must be made to very exacting, scientific standards—involving as in the Almer Coe Laboratories from 15 to 29 separate operations and no less than seven verifying tests for accuracy.

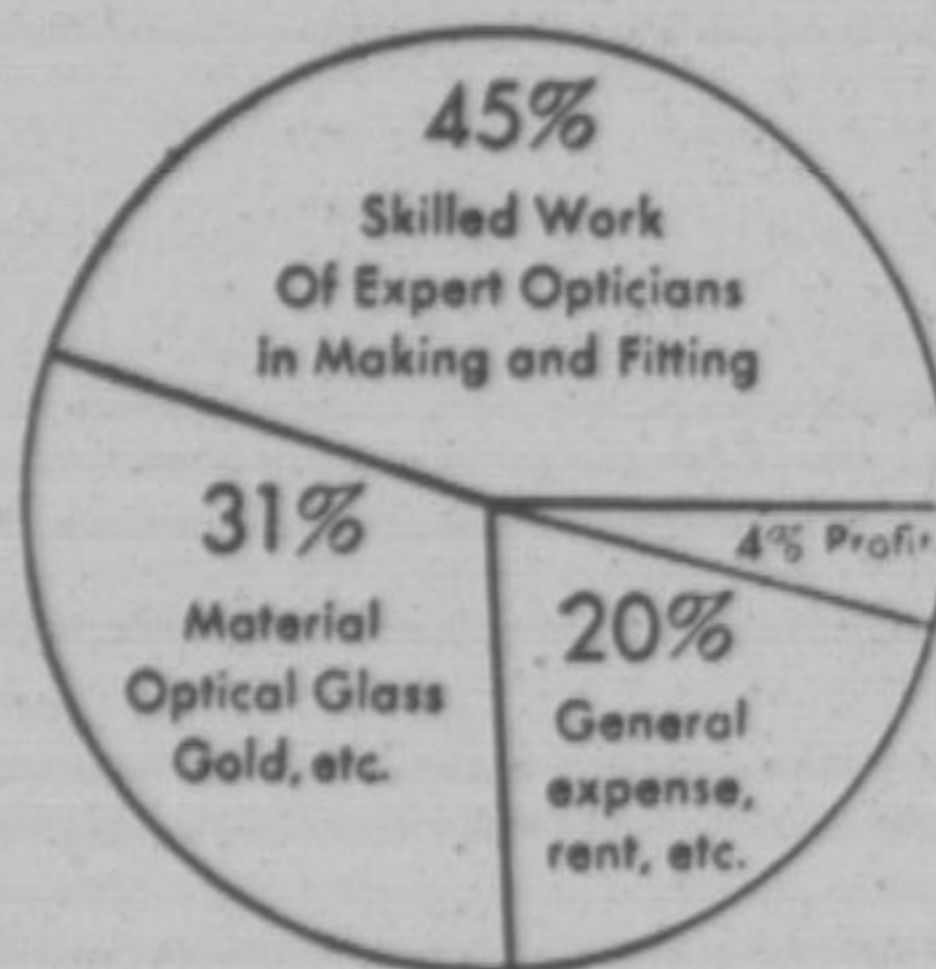

WHEN about to purchase eyeglasses it is well to give a little thought to the possibilities of helping or injuring your eyes, which such a purchase involves.

Eyeglasses are not merchandise to be bought and sold in stores at prices depending solely upon the wholesale cost of certain standard lenses and parts.

It is most important that the lenses be ground with scientific accuracy to the requirements of each individual's eyes and the glasses fitted so as to hold lenses at exactly the correct position before the eyes and at precisely the right distance—or serious and injurious strain will result.

In this professional work, for almost half a century Almer Coe and Company have held a position of leadership. And yet for correctly made and fitted glasses of dependable quality Almer Coe charges are extremely moderate.

HOW THE DOLLAR SPENT FOR ALMER COE EYEGLASSES IS DIVIDED

NOTE: Largest item of cost is for expert, scientific making and fitting, without which one might better not have eyeglasses. The small profit is multiplied by large volume.
