Stratton Starts Drive to Reduce Auto Deaths; Work Through Schools

Secretary of State Wm. J. Stratton has inaugurated a campaign to decrease the toll of death in automobile accidents among the school children of the state.

In a letter to automobile investigators under his direction he has ordered them to take the message of safety into the schools of the state.

Working through county and city superintendents of schools the investigators will appear before the school children and advise them of the hazards of the highways.

The investigators, schooled in the causes of motor vehicle accidents and acquainted with the streets and highways over which the children travel on their way to and from school and while at play, will bring expert advice to the children as to ways and means of escaping injury and possible death under the wheels of automobiles.

The investigators also were instructed to co-operate with other agencies and make every possible effort to secure better observance of the laws of the road.

Crusaders Send Out Publicity; to Start Member Drive Here

One thousand residents of the Highland Park area are to receive a circular explaining the ideals of the "Crusaders," an organization for prohibition reform. These were mailed from the headquarters, according to Albert Snite, head of the chapter. Membership workers are to visit the residents later, following up the mailing list.

Farwell Winston, president of the Lake Forest chapter, states the membership is steadily increasing and that dry reform is to be the issue in Lake county in all future elections until favorable legislation is secured.

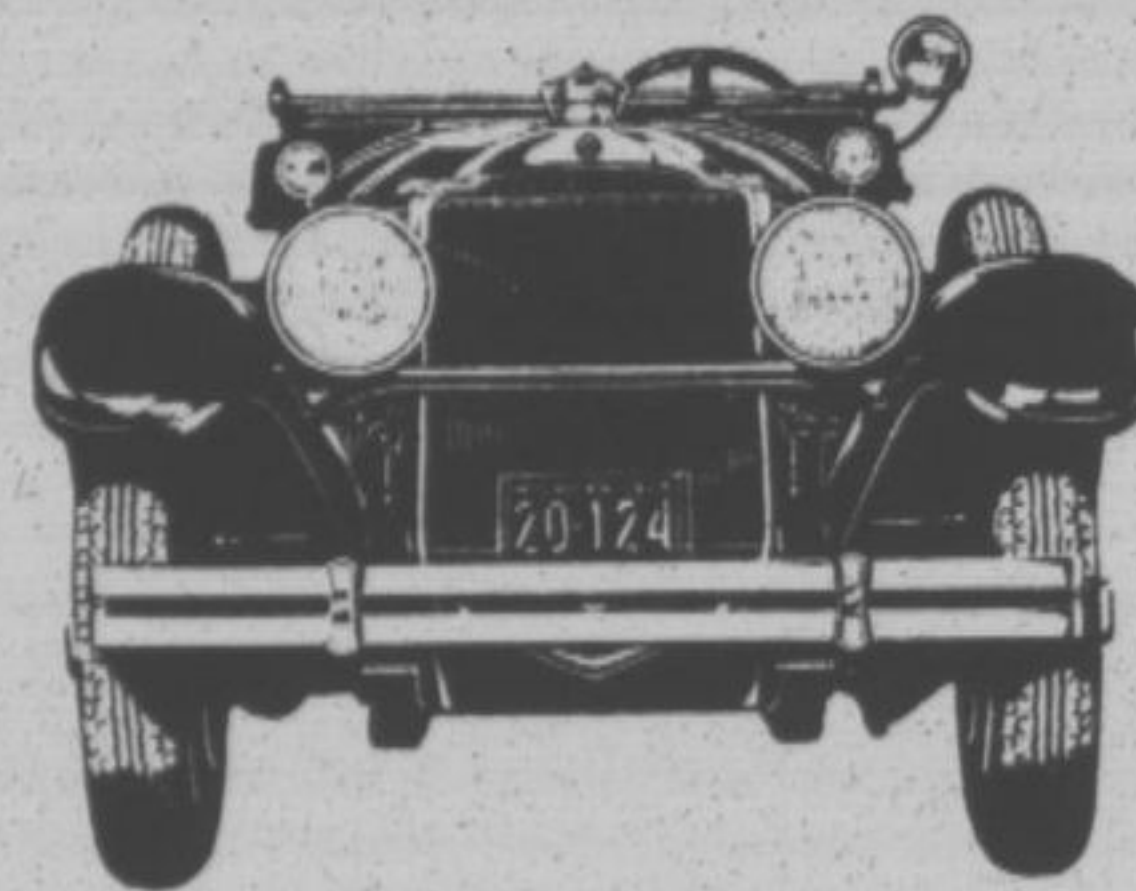

Throughout the county the Crusaders are campaigning in favor of John Hesse, democratic candidate for congress, who is opposed by Carl R. Chindblom, republican candidate.
