Plan Indian Program

There may not be many who know that in the United States an organization composed of American Indians and friends of the Indians, known as the Grand Council Fire of American Indians, is devoting its efforts to the advancement of the Indian race and to the interests of the Indians. This organization has a branch office in Chicago, headed by a Chippewa Chief.

Automatic Oil Burner Has New Showroom Here

V. A. Smith of the Silent Automatic Oil Burner is pleased to announce to residents of Highland Park the opening of a new showroom at 386 Central avenue.

In addition to the above location, he maintains a very large and pretentious show room and service quarters at 900 Linden avenue, Hubbard Woods, and at 1620 Sherman avenue, Evanston. Here, amid pleasant surroundings, the Silent Automatic Oil Burner may be seen in operation, thereby home owners may determine its silence.

Architects and heating men of prominence have expressed amazement after viewing the Silent Automatic Oil Burner in operation. It is said by many of them it's so different from what they expected, owing to the fact that the Silent Automatic operates so differently from others. These same men have predicted that the Silent Automatic will be the ultimate method of home heating owing to the fact that it has all the advantages of the quietness, cleanliness and dependability, as that of gas, and of course, it is one-third the cost.

Mrs. G. Eldredge Hamlin of South Linden avenue entertained informally at luncheon on Monday for her mother, Mrs. H. G. Straight of Los Angeles, Calif.

Council Moves to Regulate Miniature Golf; Landscape Plan

Miniature golf courses received their first recognition as an industry Monday evening, when the city council adopted an ordinance regulating their construction, operation and maintenance.

Besides requiring a license fee and a permit from the building commissioner, golf courses will have to abide by a midnight closing provision.

The measure was adopted to curb excessive establishment of the courses and to give the city a new revenue. It was held, also, that a license fee would give pause to a promoter without sufficient capital.

Highland Park will soon be subjected to the most modern beauty treatment, according to the plans of Jens Jensen, internationally famous landscape architect, and Jesse Smith, principal of the Elm Place school, as outlined at this meeting of the city council.

The architect and educator, members of a volunteer committee to beautify the city, will start the work with $1,000 previously voted for that purpose by the council. They are being assisted by Commissioner Lyle Gourley.

Existing plans provide for the embellishment of parkways on the east side of Green Bay road from Vine avenue north to the city limits. Hedges and vines will be planted in formal design.

Additions to the present limited funds may be obtained from property owners along the streets which are to be decorated, Mr. Smith told the council. Householders are also expected to aid the beautification committee in their plans to root up all dead trees on city parkways. The wood will be available to residents for firewood.

John Western Offers Fine Line of Winter Apples from Michigan

At this season of the year John Western, president of Modern Cemetery and Mausoleum company, also of Bay-Lake Fruit farms, a Michigan corporation, is giving a lot of satisfaction to a wide range of people in practically every community from Racine to and including Chicago by giving them the opportunity to buy very toothsome winter apples. Mr. Western has a wayside store on the Green Bay road near the North Shore cemetery greenhouses. At this place he has been selling direct to consumers, two carloads of apples annually during the last 12 years. To date this year he reports having sold upwards of 1,000 bushels of such varieties as the Wealthy, Jonathan, McIntosh Red, Wagener, Rhode Island Greening, Talman Sweet, etc. Mr. Western has this year cans of very delicious cherries, both sweet and sour, and raspberries, also apple cider and cherry cider. Many residents of Highland Park and Lake Forest have purchased a store of these delicacies during the last few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney L. Schwarz of S. Sheridan road are spending this week in New York City.

Urges Preservation City's Shade Trees

If the question were asked of any number of visitors to the north shore "What particular feature in your mind, contributes most to the beauty and charm of this section"—the answer of nine out of 10 would undoubtedly be "your trees."

Whether we, who live in Highland Park realize it or not, nothing delights our eye more than our trees. Property owners frequently go to large expense to preserve their own trees. Do our city trees not have as definite a value to us as citizens?

Property owners have in many instances cared for trees on park ways in front of their homes. In many cases they have not. It is apparent to any observer that our trees in our parks and on park ways, planted by city fathers of the last and preceding generations are shamefully neglected.

Many are dying slowly from lack of food. All are more or less full of unsightly and harmful dead and decaying branches, which act as harboring places for borers and fungus diseases which spread to healthy wood. Some of our school children are in actual danger from dead limbs, many of great size under which they play each day.

Highland Park trees have a tremendous money value. We believe some provision should be made that these trees will be enjoyed by future generations as much as we ourselves enjoy them. Highland Park is the only town between Chicago and Waukegan which does not have a city forester, or some one who is capable to actually engaged in adorning our citizen in the care of their trees and to supervise the care of park and school trees.

A city forester is needed in Highland Park.
