

FORTUNES AT Auction

IN an auction room in the business district of a large city, securities that have "no market" are sold weekly to the highest bidder.

For the most part they are put up for sale by the executors of estates left by pathetically over-optimistic men and women.

Here is a partial list of a single sale:

There is one way of protecting your heirs from the unhappy discovery that your safe deposit box holds any such "securities." Have us check up your investments at least once a year. Then, to protect your heirs from possible mis-investment of the money you leave, you can easily set up Trust Funds under your will, and so place the responsibility for wise investment in sound securities upon us as Trustees.

Your fortune—large or small—let us help you to keep it intact.
