Local Merchants Plan Buy Now Campaign; See Their Ads Next Week

Next week through the columns of the Highland Park Press many of the local business houses are planning to stage a Buy Now campaign to stimulate business by offering the public of Highland Park and vicinity special values in merchandise.

This plan, which has been adopted in many cities with great success and marked benefit to the buying public, is based on the idea that today much greater values may be obtained for every dollar spent than during any recent period. Today a dollar will buy merchandise to the value of what it required $1.40 to purchase in the post-war years. In every line prices are reduced from what they were in those years, and wise buyers are taking advantage of this fact in making their scheduled purchases at this season of the year.

Persons with regular incomes, men and women in steady jobs, may now enjoy these advantages because their dollars will buy much more now than at any time in recent years. Much of the present economic condition is caused by the fact that this class has been too much influenced by the popular cry of "Hard times," when in reality they have not been affected by existing conditions unless it be that it has placed them in a more advantageous position by reason that with their regular income they can now purchase greater values than before.

To encourage sensible buying by those who appreciate values and are able to continue their regular purchase of necessary things, the merchants participating in this Buy Now drive are offering notable inducements in the way of exceptional values in advertisements to appear in next week's Press. Watch for these ads, and take advantage of the special offerings therein to be found.
