

Which Plan is Yours

A farmer died leaving all his property to his two children.

They were young and without experience. The boy decided to become an important business man so he invested all of his and nearly all of his sister's money in a business he knew nothing about. It failed with complete loss in two years.

Another farmer died. In his Will he named his bank Executor of his estate. He instructed the bank to help his children learn to manage their property and to turn control of it over gradually as they could care for it wisely.

Those children are prosperous and the bank has been "like a father" to them. They found the bank's help worth much.
