Things to Cook

BY NINA T. BREWER

Home Service Department
North Shore Gas Company

Sometimes, when the holiday season is over and we have been working and planning to prepare our feasts of fruit cake, plum pudding and the various delicious pies and other desserts, we like to relax and serve something that is simple and easy to prepare.

For this purpose why not try a dessert made of cookies and whipped cream. While this is not new, it is usually acceptable to the whole family and has the advantage of being not only easy to prepare but attractive and delicious.

Home made cookies may be used, if wished, and vanilla wafers or some of the delicious chocolate wafers or other preferred cookies may be used. Nut cookies are also very tempting.

The only preparation necessary is the whipping and sweetening of the cream, adding a very little vanilla or other flavoring and arranging this between the layers of cookies. Place in refrigerator for three or four hours, or this may be prepared in the morning for dinner at night, or even the day before it is to be used.

The cookies may be placed on end, with some of the cream between, making a long roll, cutting in diagonal slices and serving with a little more of the cream if wished; or they may be placed flat in the bottom of a dish and piling one on top of the others in individual piles.

Another attractive way is to make the individual servings by placing the cookies on end, using as many for each small roll as wished for each serving, then serving each roll whole instead of cutting one large roll.

If you wish to make them a little more festive in appearance, get a small amount of candied rose or violet petals and either crumble and sprinkle over the whipped cream when serving, or place a few whole petals on the cream. This will sometimes help to carry out a color scheme for a luncheon or birthday party and the candied petals may be obtained at many confectioners.

Mrs. Mary A. Horton died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Imogene Finer, 626 Walnut street, Waukegan, last week at the age of 76 years.

Henry Berk, veteran Waukegan barber, passed away last week at his home, 117 Lake street. He was born in Ringwood, Ill., on Jan. 12, 1858.

Charged with manslaughter in connection with the deaths of Eric Turner, 33, and R. E. Brunson, 27, James Wallace, 25, of 32 North West street, Waukegan, was bound over to await the action of the March term of the Lake county grand jury by Police Magistrate Michael J. Haney of that city. Bond was set at $7,000.

One hundred and thirty leaders in business and other civic circles in Waukegan and North Chicago were named as members of a committee to sponsor and advise the "Waukegan and North Chicago Forward Movement," by J. E. Sams, president of the Waukegan and North Chicago chamber of commerce.

Educational Tours Are Being Conducted

Professor Frank Beck of Northwestern university is director of the Chicago reconciliation trips which are being conducted by Northwestern university. These trips are held each Saturday and offer an opportunity for those who are not fortunate enough to travel, to become familiar with the customs, and habits, political and industrial, right here in our own country. Last week, the subject of Russia was taken up, and a trip was made through the Russian settlement.

This Saturday the Epic of the American Indian will be the study. All those interested will meet at the Field Museum Saturday morning at 10:45 where a guided lecture by Dr. Paul Marten, Indian specialist at the museum will be given. At 12:15 there will be a luncheon at Rococo house, where Mr. Fred Leighton, who is in charge of the Indian Trading Post, will talk on "Handcraft of the Indian." There will be a complete Indian program followed by a dinner, served in real Indian style at St. Simons parish house, after which there will be a Pow Wow followed by music and dancing. A very small charge is made for the tour and the dinner.

Further information regarding these tours may be had by calling Mrs. O. F. Jensen, telephone H. P. 2522.

Tells of Beauties of a Country Landscape

An artist is often as good a painter with words as he is with the brush. The other day a painter buttonholed a friend in the Art Institute, whither he had gone to enter pictures for the next Chicago Artist's show, and said: "Think of a vast stretch of undulating country covered with a mantle of purest white; the picturesque Rock River at Grand Detour below you, winding its sinuous way through the valley; as far as the eye can reach you see the country broken here and there by clumps of trees, or a farmer's home, or cut into patterns by fences and roads; and over it all Silence — a silence unbroken, such as you never know in the city; your home perched on the cliff, where from your window you look out upon this spotless landscape. The odors of the roast duck in the oven penetrate the room, and the grape wine at your elbow invites refreshment. It is Christmas day. The sun changes the snow crystals into millions of sparkling diamonds and a feeling of unutterable peace steals over you. But it is the silence — that ineffable, indescribable, tender, silence that gets you. Then as the sun sinks behind the horizon and the sky changes from rose to purple and the lights in the little village of Grand Detour across the river peep forth into the semi-darkness, you feel that you are under the spell of a magnificent work of art the like of which no human being can approach."
