W. C. T. U. NOTES

More than 50 years ago the original Crusaders swept the saloons from 10,000 towns by an avalanche of prayer and public sentiment, and organized the WCTU.

Today a wet organization of wealthy men has had the discourtesy to adopt the same name—"Crusaders"—and is working to bring back liquor.

One of these wet crusaders evidently got a call down from his boss who would not let him wear a Crusader button around the office. His name was Peter J. Peel and he wrote the most heart-broken letter to the editor of the Chicago Evening Post.

Imagine a man breaking into print because he had a button ordered off him!

However, a W.C.T.U. woman took care of Mr. Peel. Mrs. Ethel Wernecke of Evanston, wrote to the same paper which immediately published her letter. It is worth reading:

"To the Editor of the Post: I have read with considerable sympathy of the plaint of Peter J. Peel concerning the cruel employers who ordered the crusader buttons from the button holes of two youthful wets. I have all the more sympathy because I know of the former hardships of the real Crusaders, those women who crusaded against the saloon in the '70's, closed 10,000 saloons in six months and organized the W.T.C.U. Almost as severe as having their buttons ordered off was the treatment accorded by the police of Cincinnati to those crusading women; they were arrested, thrown into jail; they were set upon by mobs, attacked by dogs; jerryed at and intimidated. In Chicago these early crusaders, asking for the closing of the saloons on Sundays, were set upon and attacked by a mob recruited in the loop saloons. As they went into saloons to pray for the inebriates there the saloon-keepers threw dirty water on them. The mother of Mrs. Thomas Edison was among these early crusaders thus mobbed; also the wife of President McKinley.

"Yes, it is pretty tough that these male crusaders for the return of the saloon era have to have their buttons ordered off; it is a wonder to me that they are able to stand it."

Dr. H. J. Gastfield Is Attending Convention of State Veterinarians

New facts about disease problems with which local livestock and poultry raisers must cope will be studied and reviewed by Dr. H. J. Gastfield while he is away from his office February 10 and 11 attending the twelfth annual Illinois Veterinary conference at the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

The conference is for the 600 or more graduate veterinarians of the state and is designed to give them the latest developments on the treatment, control and eradication of animal diseases. Prominent authorities from other state universities, the federal and state governments and the Illinois Veterinary Medical association as well as staff members of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, will appear on the program.
