Ed Wynn's Antics Delight Audiences

Wynn's fooling is contagious, and, on the talking screen, he is, more than ever, "The Perfect Fool." Rarely, indeed, is such supreme fun-making, such honest laugh-making presented for the entertainment of an audience. We heartily recommend Ed Wynn for people of all ages, and this includes everybody from six to sixty.

The story of "Follow the Leader" centers around Wynn's comic antics, but a clever little romance, played by Ginger Rogers and Stanley Smith, looms up in the background with enjoyable effect. It's not a serious romance, just a boy-and-girl affair which adds joint and flavor to the Wynn fooling.

Rogers and Erwin in "Along Came Youth"

In "Along Came Youth" Rogers is seen as the romantic youth American stranded in England, and Erwin is his buddy. Whereas Rogers is a success at love-making. Erwin is a terrific flop. He even has to get William Austin, a likewise bashful suitor, to propose to his girl for him.

Just as in "Young Eagles" Erwin is seen to good comedy advantage as a partner for the dashing, romantic Rogers. His difficulties as a befuddled, bashful lover provide the comedy highlights of this zestful and exciting fun-and-love fest.

"Under Suspicion" Is Long Romance

Once more Lumsden Hare, well known character actor of the stage and screen, finds himself in a British role, this time in "Under Suspicion," the Fox Movietone song romance with a Royal Canadian Mounted Police background.

In "Under Suspicion," Hare impersonates Commandant Freil, in charge of the Canadian Mounties. The leading roles of this outdoor romance are portrayed by J. Harold Murray, who recently appeared in "Women Everywhere" and "Married in Hollywood," and Lois Moran the charming little blonde star who scored heavily in "Not Damaged." Other prominent members of the cast are J. M. Kerrigan and Marie Saxon.

DIVORCE AMONG FRIENDS

"Divorce Among Friends" sets forth with extreme humanity and much hilarity the gallivanting adventures of two "new married" young folks, and their ultra-modern friends, a tippling sheik, and a blonde lady with designs on the husband. The cast which presents this little classic of matrimony-gone-mad, includes Irene Delroy, Natalie Moorehead, Lew Cody, James Hall and Margaret Seddon. The play is an adaptation of "Two Time Marriage," a story by Jack Townley, Arthur Caesar, Broadway wise-cracker, did the dialogue. Roy Del Ruth directed.

Double Bill Is Scheduled 2 Nights At the Deerpath

"Tol'able David," screen classic from the pen of Joseph Hergesheimer, known the world over for his significant works of more than temporary fame will be shown at the Deerpath theatre Friday evening.

Saturday a leader in fun and a leader in laughs, Ed Wynn, will appear in "Follow the Leader."

"Part Time Wife," gay and thoroughly entertaining Fox movietone comedy romance will be seen Monday and Tuesday, proving that a golf course is the best path to a lady champ's heart. Plenty of laughs and human interest assure this picture a highly successful run.

"Divorce Among Friends" and "Under Suspicion" are the two features to be shown on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. A good cast of characters appear in both pictures.

Richard Barthelmess, First National-Vitaphone star, has developed an intense interest in Old California. The reason being nothing less than his current production "The Lash," a version of "Adios" the popular novel by the Bartletts which will be shown Friday.

Leila Hyams Stars In Uproarious Comedy

"Part Time Wife," gay and thoroughly entertaining Fox movietone comedy romance proves that a golf course is the best path to a lady champ's heart. Plenty of laughs and human interest assure this picture a highly successful run.

Mr. Murdock, portrayed by Edmund Lowe, was a quick-tempered, crotchety captain of the gasoline industry, so completely weighed down by big business that his heart of gold couldn't shine through the rough exterior. His wife, Leila Hyams, breaks under the strain of living with him and leaves him to pursue her course as amateur lady golf champ.

Murdock promptly has a nervous breakdown and is advised to take up golf. He does, and through his caddy, Tommy Clifford, learns a great deal more than how to play just that game. He meets his wife again on a golf course and, with the aid of a good game and Tommy's philosophical advice, succeeds in winning her back.

DICK WINS AGAIN

Richard Barthelmess, who is now to be seen in the latest First National production, "The Lash," is without doubt doing the most effective work of his remarkable career. He plays the part of a hard-riding, fighting, loving vaquero of old California, in a way to make the galleries and the pit, too, yell for more. Mary Astor and Marian Nixon are in the fine cast, as well as many masculine screen favorites. Frank Lloyd directed.
