Fine Program Is Scheduled Next Week at Alcyon Theatre

The kings of the air, "Amos 'n' Andy" will be seen in their first talking picture "Check and Double Check" Thursday and Friday evenings at the Alcyon theatre.

"Part Time Wife," Fox Movietone comedy drama coming Saturday, is a highly amusing farce of wedded mishaps in which Edmund Lowe scores as the troubled young husband of Leila Hyams, whose seeming indiscretions lead to her denunciation as a "part time wife."

Charles Farrell and Maureen O'Sullivan, a "team" that is expected to score new popularity records on the speaking screen makes its initial bow to local film fans Sunday and Monday in "The Princess and the Plumber," a charming romance laid in a mythical Balkan country.

Those who have been clamoring for more of Ruth Chatterton, and they are legion in view of her outstanding performances for the talking screen, get a multiple serving of perfect drama in "The Right to Love," new Paramount talking picture which will be shown Tuesday and Wednesday.

Robert Woolsey, comedian, is funnier than ever in his first "straight" film comedy role. He is co-featured with Bert Wheeler in "Hook, Line and Sinker," to be presented Thursday.

Wheeler Fired — Now Star

Bert Wheeler, featured in Radio Pictures' hilarious comedy, "Hook, Line and Sinker," once was "fired" from the Palace theatre in New York, because he wasn't funny. Now he is considered one of the finest comedians in Hollywood.

Amos 'n' Andy Are Greatest Linguists

Ralf Harolde, who plays the "heavy" in Radio Pictures' feature comedy, "Check and Double Check," starring Amos 'n' Andy, declares they are the world's greatest linguists.

"Throughout the production," Harolde declares, "I was amazed at the rapidity with which they transposed the dialogue for the picture into their own particular dialect. They took the longest sentences, and after one brief glance turned them back-end-to, upside down and crossways, then spoke them in their own inimitable fashion!"

Barzage Protege's Portray Co-Roles

Although Charles Farrell and Maureen O'Sullivan, featured players for Fox Movietone, are both "discoveries" of Frank Barzage, they have never worked together in a film until their recent co-features in "The Princess and the Plumber."

"The Princess and the Plumber" is a charming romance of a lonely princess and an American engineer, with its setting laid in a mythical region of the Balkans, and with plenty of action and surprises and comedy to make it highly enjoyable.

Noiseless Recording New Era in Talkies

"What I consider to be as great an advance in the art of talking motion pictures as the talking pictures themselves were over the old silent kind, will be demonstrated when our theatre shows "The Right to Love" next week," states manager Straus of the Alcyon. This picture was recorded by the Western Electric New Process Noiseless recording and will be a revelation to those hearing it. It eliminates all extraneous sounds, hissing and scratching noises.

Mr. Straus has had expert engineers make a thorough check of the sound system and theater. No effort or expense has been spared to give his patrons the full benefit of this new system of noiseless recording.

Big Set for Comedy

What is regarded as the most pretentious interior setting ever constructed for a talking picture comedy was used in Radio Pictures' "Hook, Line and Sinker," co-features those undisputable kings of laughter, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey.

It represents the interior of a resort hotel. Two huge sound stages were converted into one to provide the necessary space—230 by 100 feet. The lobby alone is 100 by 80 feet. This includes a large patio, a beautiful interior garden and spacious balconies.
