Many Present at Hobby Show and Court of Honor

To the stirring music of the bugle and drum, Boy Scouts entered the school gymnasium and took their places, Saturday evening, March 14, at the annual Bannockburn-Deerfield Boy Scout Hobby Show and Court of Honor. The troops participating were 50 of the Wilmot school, 51 of the Rotary club, 52 of the Presbyterian church and 75 of the Catholic church. Some of the groups presented stunts. Troop 52 challenged troop 50 to a contest on rank in scouting, the study of which covers a long period of time and preparation. It is earned by passing twenty-one tests, both at camp and in the home troop. In the fire-making, Mark Andrews of Troop 52, got fire first.

Troop 51 gave a radio skit, preceded by an introduction of its members, with just their heads appearing through a sheet. The Wilmot troop exhibited first aid, and the Presbyterian troop, signalling.

The lighting of the arch, as Edward Cazal read the Scout code, was very impressive.

The meaning of the Scout pin was explained. Mark Andrews told of its shape and placed it on a large blackboard. Harold Huhn explained the eagle and placed it upon the pin. Dan Wolterding placed the stars and told about them. Sturgess Lockridge explained the motto "Be Prepared" and put it in its place. Thomas Duffy placed the knot of friendship on the pin. Edwin Wood summed up the speeches of the boys.

In the Court of Honor, awards were presented and badges given; also a charter given to the Holy Cross Troop 75. Edward Cazal became an Eagle Scout, and the medal was given him by his father, Mr. H. G. Cazal, Scout District commissioner of Deerfield and Bannockburn. There are now two eagle scouts, the other being Harold Huhn.

As a fitting ending, the six boys who explained the pin took places on the illuminated arch, with Bob Ginter in the center, blowing taps. The walls of the halls and gymnasium were lined with pictures of Ma-Ka-Ja-Wan and hobbies, such as collections of matches, Indian arrow heads, several coin collections, four or five stamp collections, and wood work. Mr. Henry Rhode, Scoutmaster at Berkley, Ill., with four of his boys, attended and they exhibited a collection of 57 leaves, coins, and uniform buttons.

Besides the 77 scouts, there were 20 officers and committee men and about 300 guests.

A flashlight picture was taken of the officers' and committee men, which will appear in a later issue.

Without the work of preparation by the officers and committees this program could not have been a success, and Mr. Cazal has voiced his appreciation of their efforts.

The Sewing guild of the Holy Cross church will meet next Thursday afternoon in the parish hall.
