Compare Cost of High School Education in North Shore Schools

It costs less to educate a pupil in the Waukegan township high school than in other leading high schools on the north shore offering similar courses of study and educational advantages, according to a report submitted to the local board last week by Secretary John E. Reardon of the board. The per capita cost of education in the Waukegan high school, Mr. Reardon showed, is $204 per pupil, as compared to $265 at Deerfield-Shields, $240 at New Trier, and $293 at Evanston.

Comparisons to be fair, Mr. Reardon points out, must be on the same basis. For that reason, he says, a comparison of tax rates is not fair because the basis of valuation is not the same. Waukegan is an industrial community, with a low valuation, he points out, which of necessity makes the tax rate higher. The assessed valuations in Lake Forest, Highland Park and Evanston are higher and the rates are correspondingly lower. For this reason Mr. Reardon argues that the per capita cost is the only fair basis to be used.

Paddock's Bill to Limit County Board Members Goes Over

A virtual agreement is said to have been reached by members of the general assembly and county officials, whereby membership on all county boards in counties with a population in excess of 100,000 will be materially reduced in number of assistant supervisors, but such reduction will not become effective until after the spring elections of 1933.

As a result of this agreement, the bill of Senator Ray Paddock of Wauconda, which was due for passage in the senate last week, was instead recalled to the order of second reading by the sponsor, preparatory to its amendment to meet the tacit understanding.

The first of these will be elimination of the emergency clause, so that the bill cannot become effective for the coming April 7 elections. Its progress through the assembly will be materially reduced as a result.

Says Waukegan High School Per Capita Cost Lowest; Gives Figures

Pointing to a per capita cost for the education of Waukegan township high school students much lower than the cost in other north shore high schools. Secretary John E. Reardon last week presented the Waukegan board of education with a detailed report on comparative costs showing the excellence of Waukegan's standing among other leading high schools of the state.

Waukegan's per capita cost is $204 per pupil, while Evanston's at the other end of the scale, is $298. Mr. Reardon revealed the New Trier rate is $240 and Deerfield-Shields, $265.

Further data presented in the report showed that Waukegan's expenditures for education rewarded the work of the students whose scholastic averages last year were second high among the 12 leading high schools in the state.
