

Show Motion Pictures
In Entertainment for Highwood Civic Assn.

To provide an evening of entertainment and educational instruction for the members of the Highwood Civic Improvement association and their families, two selected moving pictures were presented at the Bartlett theater, Waukegan avenue, Highwood, last Thursday evening, March 26, at 7:30.

Although the prominent speaker who was to talk on some interesting topics, educational, citizenship, and civic duties, was unable to come, Charlotte May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nelson of Highwood, gave a ballet dance that was enjoyed by everyone.

A large crowd attended, and everyone had an enjoyable evening. All members and their families were admitted free; a ticket being sent to each member and his family last Wednesday.

The Highwood Civic Improvement association is an organization formed chiefly to promote the educational, civic, and citizenship spirit of Highwood. J. O. Meyers Jr., is president; Oscar Swan, vice-president; J. J. Flannigan, treasurer, and Albert Axt, secretary of the organization.

Illinois Death Rate in 1930 Lowest Since Reliable Records Kept

A general death rate of 10.9, by far the lowest since reliable records have been kept, was announced at Springfield by Dr. Andy Hall, state health director, upon the basis of final statistics for 1930. A birth rate of 16.7, likewise an all time low average for the state, was also announced. The 83,592 deaths and 128,121 births registered gave an excess of 44,529 births over death last year and caused a net increase of 0.6 per cent in the population.

The rate of 68.8 per 100,000 population from pneumonia was the lowest since the World war by a substantial margin while the rate of 62.5 from tuberculosis gave an all time low-record from that disease. For the first time in over 40 years less than 5,000 people died from tuberculosis during a year in Illinois. Tuberculosis was charged with 4,790 fatalities in 1930.

For the state outside Chicago the number of deaths and the rate from diphtheria was the lowest of record. Only 134 deaths occurred in the down-state territory against 240 in 1929 and a previous low of 167. State health officials are freely predicting the ultimate extermination of this disease.

There was a slight increase in mortality from typhoid fever, the deaths rising from 110 to 154 in number.

From the 17 leading communicable diseases the total number of deaths in 1930 was 12,704 against 16,304 in 1929, a reduction of 3,600 or an average of 300 per month. The rate per 100,000 people from these 17 diseases went down from 218 to 166.

It's all right to make fun of the Vickersham report as too vague, but with John Rascob, Al Smith, Senator Heppard, and Senator Robinson all pulling in different directions, the democrats may have to use it in their next national platform.

Photographs of Typical Plants From World-Wide
Sources in Field Museum

More than 9,000 photographs of type specimens of plants from all over the world have been made in leading herbaria of Europe by J. Francis Macbride, a botanist of Field Museum of Natural History. Mr. Macbride is traveling under provisions of a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, to make this collection which will be of tremendous importance not only to scientists at Field Museum, but to all American botanists, as the photographs are being made available generally through the museum.

Dr. C. E. Hellmayr, associate curator of birds at Field Museum of Natural History, has been awarded the great silver medal of the Societe National d'Acclimatation de France, for his meritorious research work on South American birds.

Nearly 3000 books and pamphlets on scientific subjects have been added to the library of Field Museum of Natural History during the past year. The total number of works on the shelves is approximately 92,500.

Four cases containing specimens of the basketry and household objects of the Papago and Pima, and war and ceremonial costumes as well as riding and hunting equipment of the Apache, have been added to the exhibits representing the nomadic Indians of Arizona and New Mexico at Field Museum of Natural History.

Lecture in Behalf of Baha'i Movement

Keith Ransom-Kehler of New York City, internationally known lecturer, editor and writer, spoke in Phoenix, Ariz., last week, giving "The Great Message of Baha 'u'llah."

Mrs. Ransom-Kehler, who is the wife of the late James Howard Kehler, is traveling in behalf of the Baha'i movement throughout the world. Mrs. Ransom-Kehler, a graduate of Vassar, who has studied at four of the leading universities, is especially qualified to present the Baha'i message. She has been called one of the most brilliant women to the world platform today and at the completion of her work in Arizona will travel widely throughout Australia and the South Seas, also visiting India, lecturing on universal peace.

The Kehler home was the Deer Lick farm, across from the Briergate golf club on Deerfield avenue. It is now owned by Mr. George Gauntlett.

Says Winter Weather Has Not Injured the Illinois Peach Crop

That the orchard covered hills of Illinois will be in their peach blossom glory Easter Sunday, April 5, is the estimate of Joe W. Cummins, chief fruit inspector in the state department of agriculture. Returning from a tour of southern counties, Cummins reported to Director Pierson, that, thus far, no serious damage to the prospective peach crop is apparent. If this semi-winter continues to linger in the lap of spring, he says, the indications are that the peach orchard section will welcome beauty lovers Easter Sunday, a little later than had been anticipated. That is, unless the weather man has other plans.

At the request of Director Pierson, the marketing division is now engaged in circularizing growers and observers throughout the fruit belt to determine the condition of the crop of 1931. Winter damage, if any, will be noted; acreage coming into and passing out of bearing will be considered, and the estimate of the year's probable peach production will then be compiled.

Thus far, the peach crop killer has remained idle.

Provide Instruction For Golf Beginners

In order to stimulate interest among beginners in golf, the Community Service has recently organized a class for beginning golfers. This class will be conducted by Tom Kelly, professional of Sunset Valley golf course.

The fundamentals of golf will be taught in this class and instruction will start about the middle of April on the community course. A nominal fee will be charged.

The Community Service intends to find instructors or leaders for those who are interested in different phases of recreation. A similar service has been organized for beginners in tennis.
