

AIRWAYS CONTROL IS BEFORE COMMISSION

Application for Certificate For Operation of Planes in State Is Filed

The struggle for control of airplane passenger service between Springfield, Peoria, Bloomington, East St. Louis and St. Louis will be resumed here June 16 before the Illinois Commerce Commission, with reopening of the hearing on the application of the Century Air Lines, Inc., for a certificate to operate passenger planes between Chicago and East St. Louis. An application for a certificate by the American Airways, Inc., to operate planes between those same cities is scheduled for hearing June 23. Both companies now are operating planes, the Century company between Chicago and East St. Louis via Springfield, and the American Airways between Chicago and St. Louis, via Springfield, and the American Airways between Chicago and St. Louis, via Peoria and Springfield.

Initial Hearing

The initial hearing was held recently in Chicago, at which officials of the Century, company testified as to the operation of its lines, its financial strength and as to the demand for air service between the points affected.

By opening hearing on the applications, the Illinois Commerce Commission assumed jurisdiction in the matter. The applications are the first of their kind ever filed with the commission and it is understood that other airplane lines will ask the commission for certificates.

Numerous railroads and representatives of the federal and state governments are attending the hearings on the applications. The railroads are taking an active part in opposing the applications.

State Police Enforce Auto License Law For Trucks from Wisconsin

War on trucks from Wisconsin without licenses last week extended from beyond the first point of engagement north of Rockford to the entire boundary line of the state with Sergeant A. Noffs, of Elgin, in charge of the district, controlling the fight here.

All trucks from Wisconsin doing business in Illinois are forced to carry licenses from both states as a reprisal for Wisconsin forcing all Illinois trucks entering the Badger borders more than once a year to purchase a Wisconsin license.

The secretary of state of Wisconsin failed to attend a recent meeting held at Lansing, Mich., where the secretaries of state from Illinois, Michigan, Indiana and Iowa gathered to discuss an agreement that would permit truck owners residing near state boundary lines and doing business inter-state to buy just one license, as truck plates run unusually high.

Wisconsin did not alarm the other states by its non-attendance at the conference, but indignation ran high when Wisconsin opened a campaign to force trucks to purchase its licenses. That brought the war of reprisal that started two weeks ago at the Rockford border.

All-Day Sucker Still Is Most Popular Candy

The old fashioned all day sucker still is America's most popular candy, according to reports today of 300 manufacturers at the 48th annual National Confectioners' association convention.

Meeting the sucker demand is one of the chief concerns of the candy industry, E. E. Cahoon, manufacturer, said. Machines have now been invented that turn out 400 suckers a minute, 192,000 a day, and 1,152,000 suckers a week.

It was estimated that if 100 seven-year-old children began licking one-days production of one of the machines they would be more than 34 years old when they finished. Another statistician figured that one machine's weekly output, if laid end to end, would reach from Chicago to Milwaukee.
