Varied Activities at City Playgrounds Are All Attracting Fans

Wednesday, July 22, was left an open date for the various playgrounds with the idea that the day might be used for trips to places of interest in this district. These trips will be all-day affairs with picnic lunches; it is up to the instructors at each playground to decide where their children will go. Some of the trips being considered are the Waukegan Flats, Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Lake Geneva, and the Fox Lake lotus beds.

The tennis instruction scheduled for Sunset park on Wednesday afternoons had to be postponed last Wednesday on account of the baseball tournament; since there are all-day trips being planned for this Wednesday, it is doubtful if instruction will be given then. But every Wednesday afternoon hereafter someone will be on the courts at Sunset Park from 2:30 p.m. until 4:30 or 5:00.

Organizing Orchestra

An orchestra is in the making at Lincoln playground. James Sanford is the organizer; thus far he has a cornet, a trombone, a clarinet, and a piano, while he himself plays the drums. The outfit will perform at the Lantern Parade, and will practice regularly from now on.

The children at all playgrounds have done and thought nothing but Lanterns all week. There have been probably a hundred lanterns made, and some of them are certainly worthy of exhibition. There are both large and small lanterns, many-colored with varying designs and figures. Some people worked all day Sunday preparing and putting the finishing touches on their artistic endeavors.

Dancing Classes

The Sunset Park dancing classes are progressing quite rapidly. Next Thursday evening, at the regular park board dance, Miss Cancie's dancers will present one of two of their best numbers before the regular dance starts.

Offers Silver Cup For Playground Children

Edward M. Laing, superintendent of parks for the Highland Park East Park Board, is offering a beautiful cup to the playground child responsible for bringing the greatest number of new children to the playground during the season. The cup, a large silver affair, will have engraved on it the name of the child and the playground from which the child comes; at the end of the season, on Playground Day, the cup will be presented and the child will keep it until a new winner takes possession of it next year. Competition is very keen, and a large increase in enrollment has resulted since the initiation of the plan.
