CONSTRUCTION BEGUN ON ORPHANAGE BLDG.

Swift Memorial Hall at Lake Bluff Institution Is For Pre-School Children

The building will be given to the orphanage by Louis F., Edward F., Charles H., Gustavus F. and Harold H. Swift and their sisters, Mrs. Helen Neilson and Mrs. Ruth Maguire in memory of their mother and will be known as the Ann M. Swift Memorial hall.

Plans for the structure have been drawn by Architect Edward A. Schiewe, who also drew plans for the Swift Memorial Health Center, which was presented by Louis F. Swift as a memorial to Idamay Butler Swift, his late wife; his daughter, Bessie Swift, and his son, Nathan Butler Swift, and for the Mackey Memorial Community Center, which was presented to the orphanage by Mrs. H. M. McIntosh of Lake Forest as a memorial to her father, mother, brother and sister.

High School Courts Are Popular During Very Good Weather

It can be judged from the number of tennis players visiting the Deerfield-Shields high school clay courts at the new athletic field each day that the popularity of tennis in the district has had a very definite and decided increase each year.

The courts are situated on the grounds of the new thirty-acre high school athletic field located three blocks west of Green Bay road on West Park avenue.

Visiting professionals who have inspected the courts have commented favorably in the fine manner in which the courts are kept up. The fact that each morning the courts are rolled and new line laid is responsible for a good deal of their popularity.

The courts are open free to the use of Deerfield-Shields high school students, those who have graduated this past year and the incoming freshmen. For others there is a small charge which goes to the support of the tennis courts.

This perfect tennis weather means that this is a good time to get in some practice.

More information concerning the use of the courts may be obtained from an attendant stationed at the field.

Local Nurseryman Pays Tribute to Evergreens as "Plant Aristocrats"

There are so many interesting groups of evergreens, and such a wide range of forms, foliage textures and color effects, it is little wonder that evergreens are called the "aristocrats of the plant world." Evergreens add a feeling of security and comfort when planted about the foundation of the home; the tall, narrow types develop into beautiful lawn specimens—in fact, there is a suitable type of evergreen for every purpose.

No part of the grounds is quite so pleasingly adapted to the use of evergreens as the doorway entrance. Narrow columnar varieties to accent the architectural lines, with lower growers grouped about their bases—what could make a more picturesque and inviting entrance?

When planning the foundation planting of evergreens remember to choose varieties that are suited to their location. The medium and dwarf growers are best under windows and in similar places. The tall varieties are most pleasing at the corners and along the foundation where there are no windows.

Where a clipped hedge is required the richness of evergreens is without equal. Such living walls of green remain attractive throughout all seasons of the year. Remember, too, that the bright colors of a flower border are never so captivating as when evergreens form the background.

Keep the birds in mind when you plan your evergreen plantings. These feathered visitors will reward you with happy songs if you provide a sheltered nook for them, with a bird bath and feeding stand. The evergreens will make this a year-round sanctuary for the birds.

High School Offers Music Theory Course

During the past few years the attention of high school music supervisors throughout the country has been more clearly focused upon the importance of the theoretical side of a music education. To thoroughly understand and interpret music intelligently one must not only master the technique of his instrument, but must also acquire a thorough knowledge of the elements of musical structure. Too often the music student has neglected this important phase of his training to the point where his performance lacks the vitality and assurance of true understanding.

With this in mind, the music department of the Deerfield-Shields high school is anxious to have the parents of serious music students urge them to avail themselves of the opportunities offered them in the theory of music and history of music courses. The music theory courses include a comprehensive study of scale, interval and chord construction both written and manual, simple melodic and chordal ear training, the analysis of simple melodies and chords, and an occasional adventure into the field of original composition. The music history course is one which should appeal to all young music lovers since it traces the important trends of music through a study of the great composers, and a studied listening acquaintance with some of the world's finest master-pieces should encourage the student to know and enjoy more truly great music.

The orchestra, chorus and band are all anxious to add new members, and feel that a really musical year may reward their continued efforts towards artistic performance.

COUNTY BOARD IN SESSION THIS WEEK

Coming Year's Budget Approximately the Same As Last Year's, Chairman Vercoe

Lake county governmental activities will not be hampered during the coming year by lack of finances, according to A. W. Vercoe of Highland Park, chairman of the coming board's finance committee, who declared the county's revenue had not been greatly curtailed by the depression.

Vercoe said reports from Jay Morse, county treasurer, showed that collection of taxes this year was only slightly slower than in former years, despite the extension of time permitted by the emergency state law.

The board met this week to prepare the budget for the coming year, which will be approximately the same as last year's according to the finance committee chairman. However, he made this qualifying statement:

"Any expenditures which are not essential to efficient government must be eliminated. Projects which can wait until times are more prosperous must be postponed."

As usual, tax anticipation warrants will probably have to be issued in January or February. Vercoe pointed out. The $300,000 belonging to the county which is in the closed Waukegan State bank is secured and, while collection may be slow, this will not have any marked effect on the county's finances, he said.

The budget this year will include provision for operation of the county farm and for the county hospital, but can not provide for care of poor outside these institutions, according to an opinion given by Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom.

Even after the townships are able to levy taxes for support of their poor in the hospital and on the farm, according to Vercoe, the county will probably have to continue paying salaries of superintendents and other costs.

Financially Sound

The veteran banker predicted that although the Chicago banks were reported to be lukewarm toward the purchase of anticipation warrants for municipalities, they would willingly accept the county warrants "because of the obvious soundness of the county's financial condition."

He attributed fear concerning the county's finances to the crisis in Waukegan, where legal complications growing out of the changes in the form of government have endangered the city's financial standing.

Reports of the Lake County General hospital and of the county veterinarian were received Wednesday. On that day also appropriations for principal and interest on the county's first bond issue, $28,750, was voted by the board.
