To Stop Learning?

"Why do men get the idea that education stops with their last year in college, as if the A. B. degree bestowed upon them some final and glorious achievement of intelligence beyond which it is impossible to go—and rather 'bad form' too? . . . To stop learning is to stop growing. That is why the minds of so many men and women are dwarfed and strophied."—John Oliver in Four-square.

If you are in doubt about a subject on which to center your winter reading, an exhibit of reading courses, club programs, etc., which are now on exhibit in the library lobby, may be of use to you. Ask to see them, and if your chosen subject is not found among them ask an assistant to make up a list of books on your hobby.

Current Affairs and Book Reviews
Mrs. Anthony French Merrill began her series of lectures on current affairs and book reviews this morning at 10 o'clock at the Highland Park Women's club. These will extend over a period of six weeks on each Thursday morning.

Her tentative list of books to be reviewed is on file at the library and may be seen at the central desk. Mrs. Emily Beers of Vine avenue also has a list of these books.

Harold Rugg

The following books written by Harold Rugg of Columbia university, who is to speak at the Parent-Teachers' association at Deerfield-Shields high school on the evening of October 29, are now to be found in the library:

1. Introduction to American Civilization.
2. Child-centered school.
3. Culture and education in America.

Down East and Up Along

Letters from Fraternity, by A. L. McCarrison. A series of letters from a Maine farmer to Ben Ames Williams. Many of the letters are about hunting and fishing, a few are about life as he knew it as a boy in the sametown, and the rest describe his daily life on the farm.

A book for those who like to read of life in the country, and of characters whose outstanding trait is peace of mind.

Other New Books

James Fennimore Cooper, by Henry Walcott Boynton.

All Passion Spent, by Virginia Sackville-West.

Three Pairs of Silk Stockings, by Panteleimon Romanof.

Hatter's Castle, by Archibald Joseph Cronin.

The Great Plains, by Walter Prescott Webb.

I Went to Russia, by Liam O'Flaherty.

Easter Island, by Robert J. Casey.

Finch's Fortune, by Mazo de la Roche.

Libraries' Aid to Unemployed

Public libraries are in position to make three important contributions to the unemployed: An opportunity to prepare for different types of work; a profitable use of leisure time through general and cultural reading; a strengthening of the morale. The last item alone is a great achievement for any civic community.

The murder last December 13 of Harry Wilkison, former Gurnee resident shot to death as he attempted to thwart the holdup of a Herbert, Illinois, grocery store, was solved last week with the confession of Marvin Howe, 25. Howe, who admitted to Belvidere officials that he was guilty of the murder, was also identified by several witnesses of the slaying. He was arrested in Minneapolis.
