

MUNICIPAL ROSE GARDEN PROJECT

promise of labor maintenance by that co-operative board, last May, the Garden club, under Mrs. Klaber's capable direction, aided by the loyal cooperation of every member of the club and many local business men, successfully conducted a Fair which netted about $450. With this money as a nucleus, the Rose Garden committee, headed by Mrs. Klaber, and consisting of Mrs. Robert McKnight, the present president, Mrs. Leonard, Mrs. Hardacre, and Mrs. James C. Ewell, then president of the club, purchased rose bushes, fertilizer and other essentials at a minimum cost from local florists, who were interested in the venture.

Continuous Bloom

Since the blooming of the first rose, there has been a continuous bloom in the garden, which will be stopped only when the winter frosts kill the buds. Mr. Hardacre, president of the East park board, and Mr. Laing, of the board, have had a border of shrubs put in as an attractive background to the brilliant flowers.

The following are some of the varieties included in the garden: Harrison's yellow; general jack (red); gruss an teplit (red-blooms all season); the old-fashioned crested moss-rose; Madame Caroline Testout (the pink rose seen everywhere on the streets in Seattle); Nur Mahal; Altaica (white); Birdie Blye (a hybrid of the Japanese multiflora rose, which blooms all season), Schoener's nut kana (a pink rose hybridized by a clergyman of that name), and the Austrian cooper rose.

The Rose Garden has been entered in the National Municipal Rose Garden competition sponsored by the Woman's Home Companion. This involves the sending of reports of weekly progress, and of three general reports with photographs. The prizes will be based on the progress made plus the number of people visiting the garden. Mrs. McKnight has been most assiduous in reporting the weekly progress. Every plant is labeled so that visitors can readily distinguish the varieties. The contest ends Dec. 1932, and it is earnestly hoped that our garden will win one of the prizes.

Plans for the future involve the building of an informal pool, benches scattered invitingly throughout the garden, and an attractive entrance arch. Each member of the club is earning $5 in some original manner to make these plans a pleasant reality. When this has been done, the Rose Garden will have become a beauty spot in our community, which will attract not only our own residents, but people from all along the north shore who enjoy beauty.

These district editors are pictured above in the shipping room where the papers are unloaded as they come from the North Shore. The scouts are seen loading papers to be sent up

GAMES AND STUNTS FOR THANKSGIVING

ing. For instance, there will be, perhaps, 15 pilgrims, 15 pumpkins, 15 John Aldens. The cards are turned face down on the table. The leader begins by turning up two cards. If they do not form a pair, the player picks them up and turns up two other cards; if these do not form a pair, they are turned down and the play goes on as before. The object of the game is to try to remember the location of the various cards, and of course, to try to secure the highest number of pairs. For example, number one turns up card 2 and 4; not forming a pair, they are turned down again. Number two picks up card; remembering the position of the cards turned up by number one, she puts her own four with that of number one, and has the privilege of turning up two more cards. The cards turned up may be 11 and 3; the play now goes on to number three, and so on.

"Bunco," another table game, can also be played by any number of people. Divide the group into two sides. The leader keeps score but does not play, except to select alternately the number which is to be "bunco" for that time. After the group has been evenly divided, the leader of one side may either select a number or throw the dice, the only equipment necessary for the game, and decide by the number that falls what number is to be "bunco" for that game. Each team then begins to play. Each player tries in one attempt to throw the number that the leader threw. If he is successful, he calls "Bunco" and is given a score of 5, 3, or 1, and the chance to throw again. If he fails the next player tries his luck. As each player scores, the leader takes note of it. The team having the highest score after the last player has thrown is winner of that game. The next time, the leader of the other side has the privilege of either throwing for or selecting the number which is to be "Bunco" for the next game. This game is especially interesting when played as a progressive game. According to this plan, four people play together. The two with the highest score, at the ring of a bell, move on to the next table.
