Critic's Estimate

"Mr. Ernest S. Klempner is an artist who adheres steadfastly to the tenets of what is generally called the "conservative" school, yet he has never failed to keep pace, through observation and experiment, with what he considers the worthiest developments in contemporary painting. He received his art education in Vienna and London and, before coming to America, had a successful career in England, where he did portraits of countless celebrities for publication for many years. He repeated this success in New York and Chicago. Although at one time etchings and drawings formed a large part of his creative output, of recent years he has turned his attention almost exclusively to portrait painting.

"Mr. Klempner's fluent draughtsmanship is the keystone of all his work. In his paintings he combines this talent with sure taste in composition and an original and agreeable feeling for color. Artists will see in Mr. Klempner's portraits many artistic effects keenly perceived and expertly handled. The layman will always find those two prime virtues, likeness and character, combined with a decorative quality that makes his paintings delightful pictures as well as good portraits.

"Paintings of women and children, some of them done in the open air, are among Mr. Klempner's best work. He manages to capture the eager spontaneity of childhood and record it charmingly. He is also highly successful in portraying men, as is shown in his recent portraits of Mr. Melvin Traylor, Mr. Earle Reynolds and Prof. James H. Breasted.

"In short, Mr. Klempner has command of three great artistic powers—observation, selection and expression. The result of their happy combination is shown in his work."
