

OUTDOOR CHRISTMAS DISPLAY CONTEST

greatest of all holidays. What a delightful feeling of satisfaction we experience when we know that we have proffered a real, unselfish wish of 'Merry Christmas' to everyone who passes our house!"

Elaborate and expensive displays will not be at all necessary to assure a home a place on the prize list.

It is not the intention to recommend that every household in the city spend a large amount of money in procuring material for displays. The humbler displays will have just as much chance to attract the eyes of the judges as will the more pretentious ones, so long as they show originality, effort and taste. But the Highland Park Press does want each home to have at least a lighted wreath to proclaim the Yuletide greeting from its window.

Rules Next Week

Equipment for exterior Christmas displays does not require exorbitant expense. Small floodlights and strings of colored lights and ornaments may be purchased quite cheaply. And in many instances it is possible to use home made equipment.

Booklets containing many valuable suggestions for arranging displays may be obtained free at contest headquarters, at the office of this newspaper.

The rules of the coming contest are to be announced next week, at which time entrance blanks will be published in this paper. Later the judges to award the prizes will be chosen, and their names made known. Until that time every citizen in this city is urged to begin planning his share in making the Christmas of 1931 the most memorable in the city's history.
