

STRATTON'S OFFICE DISPLAYS ECONOMY

use of Illinois motorists. Several hundred thousand of these were circulated in Illinois and requests for additional copies still are being received from Illinois concerns employing many drivers. In addition, automobile investigators from the secretary of state's office have made numerous safety talks to school children and also have done much to compel observance of the motor vehicle law.

Interest on Collections

Another important business practice initiated by the present secretary of state was that of putting money collected from the sale of automobile license plates out on interest in various banks of the state. These funds earn upwards of $25,000 a year in interest which is promptly turned into the state treasury.

In the year now ending, the securities department of the secretary of state's office aided in restoring approximately $1,500,000 to investors on void sales. In the same period the department qualified approximately $500,000,000 securities for sale in Illinois and refused to approve about $26,000,000 in worthless paper. In the eleven years the department has been in operation about $482,000,000 in securities have been barred from Illinois markets.

Largest Revenue Producer

Aside from the department of finance, which collects the motor fuel tax, the secretary of state's office is the largest revenue producer in the state government. In 1931, the office collected approximately $22,250,000 in fees of various kinds. Of this sum, $18,400,000 came from the sale of automobile license plates; $3,700,000 from domestic and foreign corporations; and $100,000 from various other sources.

The license fees are paid into the state treasury to be used for road building purposes. The rest of the fees go into the state treasury revenue fund and are used to meet obligations incurred by legislative enactments.

allocate areas in the least objectionable localities for this type of building. Mr. Crane pointed out the need for careful restrictions as to the percentage of building on the land, and also requirements as to height, etc.

Discussion Follows

There followed a discussion of the subject presented. Mr. Stern suggested that an official or semi-official commission might be appointed consisting of architects and others who could pass on any plans which were contemplated. Messrs. Carr and Klaber added that men of influence in the community should be appointed to such a commission in addition to architects. It was also pointed out that it would be advisable to have the real estate agencies in the community cooperate with such a commission by informing it of sales which have taken place to those who contemplate developing their property. The commissioners might then communicate with the owners before they have finally drawn up plans and specifications when it is easier to eliminate objectionable features. If such a commission would really function it could avoid unattractive looking apartments and stores from being built. We already have examples of the latter in Highland Park and Ravinia. Such a procedure has worked with considerable success in Glencoe and other suburban communities.

There was considerable discussion as to the advantages of eliminating apartments from the community and maintaining Highland Park as "A Woodland Village." This was unquestionably the ideal in everybody's mind but the discussion indicated that there were practical considerations which have been indicated.

It was made clear by the chairman that there were no immediate building plans under way but that the question of apartments had come up before several bodies, including the city commissioners, and that this meeting had been called to present the proposed city plan and to discuss it. Some two years ago, Mr. Crane was authorized to work out this plan which was finished early last spring, adopted by the Plan commission and submitted to the city council for final approval. No action has yet been taken on it either by the previous council or by the present one. Mr. Maurice Berkson, chairman of the Porcupines, closed the meeting by summarizing the discussions that had taken place and indicating the legal as well as practical problems involved.

The question was asked regarding a rumor to the effect that a Catholic organization with headquarters in Saint Louis was attempting to purchase one of the large estates along the lake. It was mentioned that the village of Glencoe had not permitted this organization to purchase a site there.

There was great disappointment over the failure of the mayor to be present or to send a representative in his stead.
