for the first time portraits of Washington and his associates by painters of the eighteenth century. Other objects of great historical interest including statuary, jewelry and manuscripts are also included in the exhibit.

The life of George Washington has been filmed as a feature of the Bicentennial Celebration by Eastman Teaching Films, Inc., under the sponsorship of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission and with the co-operation of the United States Government. The picture has been made historically accurate in every detail, and many sequences have been made on the very spots where the incidents occurred in the days of Washington.

For the first time in its history, Mount Vernon has been filmed in motion pictures. This was granted through the courtesy of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association of the Union, present owners of Washington's beautiful home on the Potomac. Pieces of furniture which Washington used and clothes actually worn in his day by his associates all add to the atmosphere of the film. Other scenes were taken at historic places associated with the First President.

The picture is made in four parts, any or all of which are suitable for use by schools and organizations in general, and is adapted to use in large or small auditoriums.

time, not a Sunday proposition. Mrs. Haller, of the personnel department of Northwestern university told of girls who become problems in college because they have never been allowed to have any responsibilities at home or who have stereotyped ideas of people and happenings.

Mr. Hiram Kennicott discussed very intelligently the subject of allowances for children with wise spending and saving.

SHOW INTEREST IN SUNSET VALLEY PLANS that they had "keen time" last season and are disappointed with the new arrangement.

"In answer to that," said Mr. Kennicott, "how about the dads who are prohibited by business duties from playing mornings and the mothers who are only able to get in a game in the afternoons? I'm sure they would gladly change places with the junior members, so far as opportunity to play is concerned."

Made by Players

"These rules are all made by the players themselves, through the officers and directors they elect, who recommend them to the Highland Park East Park Board. The board is extremely liberal in letting the players themselves, through their club organization, decide how our wonderful park course can be used to the greatest advantage of the most residents of the East Park District."

But for every complaint there has been at least a dozen favorable comments on the plans outlined for the coming season at Sunset Valley. Indications are that the membership will be larger and more enthusiastic than ever before. This is pleasing to the park board as well as to the golf club, for it is a cherished hope that in time the memberships alone will support the course and less and less dependence will be placed on the out-of-town daily fee play.

Receiving Applications

That the club is not a bit too early with its membership program is evidenced by applications and inquiries already received. One is from a prominent Highland Park resident who is giving a membership as a birthday gift to his son, whose birthday does not come until late in the spring. Memberships also make good graduation presents and a number of applications of that kind are expected. The bulk of the new inquiries, however, are from business and professional men who are finding out, as hundreds have before them, that membership in Sunset Valley at prevailing rates is about the most astonishing value in health and recreation in the United States.

Highwood Indians Defeat Lake Forest

Winning both games, one through a hard fight and the other by a large percentage, the Highwood Indians' ability was acclaimed Wednesday night again.

The last minutes of the lights' game resulted in excitement as each team tied basket for basket. However, in spite of the Lake Foresters' valiant attempts the game ended with the Indians a basket ahead, the total score being 25-23.

The game with the Head Quarters Co. was another story, the Indians taking the lead from the very beginning and holding it with little effort, finally finishing up with 65-11, the opposing cagers taking the brunt of the loss.
