SIMONS' HOUSE NEARING COMPLETION

Designed by James J. Gathercoal

The J. W. Simons house, just being completed, is located on Blackhawk road just north of County Line road.

This house, like the other one designed by Mr. Gathercoal, is constructed of steel and masonry. There is a sincere simplicity in the character of the outside of the home.

The interior is compact and beautifully finished. The living room is panelled with knotty white pine on the fireplace end. The dining room is simply treated with dado mould and cove cornice in anticipation of future scenic wall paper. The kitchen has a sink more than ten feet long and besides having an abundance of case space is efficiently planned. The three bedrooms and two baths maintain the same character of the first floor rooms. There is a den over the garage and a recreation room in the basement which add nicely to the completeness of the home.

The house is completely equipped with mechanical equipment to make a very complete home.
