Former Resident
 Dies in Scotland

Mrs. John Russell received a cablegram from Scotland early this week, telling of the death of her mother Mrs. Bella Grant, wife of the late James Grant, which occurred on Monday, following a lingering illness.

About five years ago, Mrs. Grant came here and spent 18 months visiting her daughter, returning to Brora, Scotland, where she died.

She leaves a son George of Venice, Calif., a daughter Mrs. John Russell of this city, six grandchildren and five great grandchildren to survive her.

There are therefore, abundant reasons why we may still be thankful we are citizens of the United States. And abundant reasons, too, why Uncle Sam should keep out of foreign entanglements and center his attention, as he is doing at present, on attempts to reknit the economic fabric of the United States.

Anyhow, if there were a lot of paid publicity agents boosting stock in 1929 it must be admitted that now most of them belong to the army of the unemployed. At least we haven't noticed much boosting of late.
