

"Love Me Tonight" at Genesee Theatre

Maurice Chevalier's latest starring picture, "Love Me Tonight," directed by Rouben Mamoulian and featuring Jeanette MacDonald, Charlie Ruggles, Charles Butterworth and Myrna Loy, comes to the Genesee theatre, Waukegan, Sunday, September 18, for four big days.

Like previous pictures starring

Chevalier, "Love Me Tonight" is done in a humorous and whimsical vein, and is set to music. Most of the musical numbers, all written by Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, noted song-writing combination, are sung by the French star and Miss MacDonald, but other members of the cast join in at one time or another.

Chevalier is cast as "the best little tailor in all France"—a business man with a big heart and few funds. When Ruggles, a viscount, orders 16 suits from him, and then fails to pay for them, he suddenly changes his tactics, and sets out for the castle in which Ruggles lives with his uncle, and, incidentally, his cousin, Miss MacDonald, to collect. Ruggles passes him off as a baron, to get him to remain inside the sacred portals until he can raise enough money to pay him off. Chevalier and Miss MacDonald are soon in love, but their romance seems futile when the difference in their social position is revealed.
