A dark yard invites prowlers

LIGHT UP FOR SAFETY

Prowlers, petty thieves and hold-up men work under cover of darkness. They avoid lighted homes.

As a protection against these unwelcome visitors, many people are lighting up their yards. A single bracket light illuminates a large area very satisfactorily. The cost is surprisingly small—and is offset many times by the security it brings.

A small floodlighting unit may also be mounted on the house or the garage—or fastened on a pole in the yard—or simply spiked into the ground. A switch inside the house turns the light on and off.

Public Service lighting engineers will be glad to talk with you about lighting up your yard. A night demonstration on your premises will not obligate you in any way.

This single bracket light (it costs only $3.50) illuminates a large area inexpensively and effectively... Many other types of units also.

Make your back yard safe from night prowlers. Call your Public Service Store today for complete information on inexpensive night flood lighting. No obligation.
