P. O. E. Johnson, Former Citizen, Is "Admiral" Of Oil Fleet In The South

The following news story from the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle refers to a former "grand old citizen," P. O. E. Johnson, who lived here at 1122 Lincoln avenue:

"The new barge of the Pure Oil company loaded with 400 tons of gasoline is expected to leave Savannah this morning (last Friday) on its maiden voyage to Augusta, and under present plans it will arrive here Tuesday.

"P. O. E. Johnson, manager of the Pure Oil barge line, who is directing operations at Savannah, planned to leave there Wednesday and arrive here Saturday, but a two-day delay was caused by a hitch in plans.

"The large oil and gasoline barge will be the largest and most expensive cargo ever to be brought up the river on one trip, and after the first trip there will be a regular scheduled run from the warehouses in Savannah to the storage tank system in Augusta.

"Invitations to attend the celebration here Tuesday are being sent by the mayor to Major Creswell Garlington, district engineer in charge of river development for the War department, and other officials in charge of the Savannah river."

Mr. Johnson, the "Admiral of the fleet," has many friends in Highland Park who can picture him on the bridge coming up the Savannah river opening the port of Augusta. One of these friends says: "Mr. Johnson was prominent in City club affairs and social activities and as an after dinner speaker he was in great demand. He no doubt will be quite an acquisition to the Augusta Chamber of Commerce and the development of the Savannah river. Highland Parkers wish him every success in his new field."

DEMURRER UPHELD IN DEERFIELD CASE

offered by Highland Park, for water at a rate of 15 cents per hundred cubic feet, or to carry the case to the Appellate court.

Could Not Make Profit

The case last Saturday was heard by Judge Ralph Dady. Judge Owens, of Chicago, special attorney for Deerfield, argued that Highland Park could not legally raise the price of water sold to Deerfield from 9 cents (the rate several years ago) to 15 cents without the village's consent. He contended that a municipality could not legally make a profit from its water supply.

Corporation Counsel Ernest S. Gail, of Highland Park, argued that this applied only to the municipality's relation to its own citizens and not to any contract with another city or village.

Judge Dady ruled that the price of the water supplied by Highland Park to Deerfield could be set at any price the Highland Park city council decided to ask.

When the injunction was secured nearly two years ago, Deerfield owed Highland Park about $6,000 on water bills. At the present time Deerfield owes about $18,000.

Before the new pumping and filtration plant was built here, Deerfield bought water for 9 cents a hundred cubic feet. The rate was raised after the plant was built, both to local users and to outside users, and Deerfield accepted its water supply for several months before it began objecting to the new rate. The matter has been under protest for more than two years.

Deerfield sells water to its residents for from 35 cents to 40 cents a hundred cubic feet, whereas Highland Park sells the same water, bought from Highland Park at the same price, for several cents less, and is making money on the arrangement.
