BANK GOSSIP

Jones: Hello Briggs: You told me last week why a bank must charge for cashing foreign checks. I am no longer puzzled on that question. But there is another thing about a bank on which I would like some information.

Briggs: What's on your mind Jones?

Jones: You said last week that a bank belonged to its depositors and I have always had the impression that it was owned by its stockholders.

Briggs: Yes I know. A lot of people think the same way. If that was true a bank failure would not affect its depositors.

Jones: That's right. It wouldn't. I had never looked at it in that manner, but, does it all belong to its depositors?

Briggs: Yes until every depositor is paid in full of the amount he has in the bank.

Jones: Don't the stockholder get anything?

Briggs: Not until every depositor is paid in full. The stockholder might be a depositor also. If he isn't he should be if he has any money to deposit. If he is he will share equally as a depositor but as a stockholder he comes last.

Jones: Suppose when a bank fails there is not enough to pay all depositors in full, where do they get the rest?

Briggs: Each stockholder is then called upon to pay his share of the amount needed to make up the balance due the depositor.

Jones: How much may a stockholder have to pay? Isn't there a limit?

Briggs: Yes there is a limit. But, he must pay equal to the amount of stock he owns. If he owns $1,000 in bank stock he forfeits that amount and pays in another $1,000 if that much is needed to pay all depositors in full.

Jones: You mean to say if a bank has a capital of $50,000 or $100,000 its stockholders would have to put up $50,000 or $100,000 more if that much was needed to pay all depositors in full?

Briggs: That's right. That's the reason we must regard a bank as belonging to its depositors. They come first, and all the money that a bank can make above its operating expense must be set aside for the purpose of protecting its depositors. If it ever has more than enough for that purpose the balance would be divided among its stockholders. This would be called paying dividends.

Jones: Do banks sometimes pay dividends too soon?

Briggs: Yes many times they do. They have in the past more than they do now. Sometimes banks pay dividends from its profits without close investigation of its loans. Banks like individuals are apt to get bad loans occasionally and these must always be taken into consideration before dividends are paid. If some of the bank's loans should show a loss, the money paid out in dividends might be needed to cover the loss and in that case the stockholders would have to pay it back.

Jones: Then bank stock is not always a paying investment?

Briggs: No. It isn't from a money dividend point of view.

Jones: From what point of view may it be a good investment?

Briggs: Well any community needs churches, schools and a bank. It would be in bad shape without either of the three. We would not like to live in a community that did not have all three. In order for a community to have such organizations or institutions someone must contribute the amount necessary to make them possible.

Jones: I see. Then a bank stockholder is a contributor to a fund necessary to provide his community with a bank.

Briggs: That's right. A citizen who contributes money and time to the support of a church, school or bank is rendering a valued service to his community and should be respected by the entire community for his benefactorial spirit.

Jones: Well then after a part of our community has subscribed the capital needed to give all who live in it a bank, every other citizen should patronize the bank whenever possible to help in its maintenance.

Briggs: That would be the right spirit of co-operation. Through co-operation a community can have good churches, schools and banks. A community of people working together for the good of each other can have anything it needs to make a pleasant place to live.

Jones: Thanks Briggs. Another bank question is off my mind. I know now why a bank belongs almost entirely to its depositors.

Briggs: Alright Jones. See you next week.

Jones: Just a minute Briggs. What is the difference between a bank stockholder and a bank director?

Briggs: They are all stockholders alike and a director is only one of the stockholders selected to help direct the operation of the bank. Some banks have more directors than others. Anyone to be a bank director must first be a stockholder owning not less than ten shares of the bank's capital.

Jones: Thanks again Briggs, would like to talk with you some more next week about banking if you don't mind.

Briggs: O.K. Jones, so long.

Boosters Seek Their Tenth Consecutive Victory at Highwood

The Maestri Boosters of Highwood will seek their tenth consecutive victory Thursday night when they meet their local enemy, the Sanitary Barber quintet, at the Oak Terrace school gymnasium. There will be two preliminary games and the first will start at 7 o'clock.

A new Highland Park girls team, under the direction of "Wally" Miller, will meet the Highwood Pirates in the first game. In the next game "Fat's All-Stars" will play the American Legion Boosters of Highwood.

The big event will be the Boosters-Barbers game and both teams have been practicing hard all week. The Sanitary Barber lineup includes Bob Kehrwald, who is reputed as the best defense man ever seen in this vicinity. This will be a "grudge game" and a win for either team will mean very much, as both are registered in the Highwood city series to be held in the early days of March.

Sanitary Barbers Win from Wampus Indians

Led by A. Scornavacco, the Sanitary Barbers basketball team turned back the Wampus Indians last Monday night at the Oak Terrace school floor by a score of 29-22. The score at half-time was 17 to 7 in favor of the Wampus Indians.

In leading his team to victory, Scornavacco chalked up seven baskets and a charity shot for a total of 15 points. The Wampus Indians were off to a good start in the first half, but were completely succumbed by a fast Barber offense in the latter part of the game. This game served as a "warm-up" game for the Sanitary Barbers in their preparation for the big game Thursday night against Maestri's Boosters.

The wife had been put on the budget plan. At the end of each month she and her husband would go over the accounts together. Every once in a while he would find an item, "L.O.K., $3," and a little farther on, "L.O.K., $6."

Finally he said, "My dear, what is this—'L.O.K.'?"

"Lord Only Knows," she replied.—Boston Transcript.

The Duke of Marlborough had an emu given to him. It was sent to Blenheim, and great interest was taken in the chances of its capacity for procreation in this country. Eventually it laid an egg. The Duke and Duchess were away from home, so a telegram was sent to the latter by the agent to apprise her of the event. It was in these terms: "Emu has laid an egg; in the absence of your grace have put goose to sit on it."—The Passing Show (London.)
