At The Fair

By John Steele

This week I should like to take you through some of the interesting exhibits in the General Exhibits building. Here there are many interesting things to be seen, and I will tell you of a few of them.

An original idea is the main attraction in the Waterman Pen Company's exhibit. The hands of many famous people are reproduced in a plaster material. The hands of Bobby Jones, Lily Pons, Amelia Earhart are among those on display.

One section of the General Exhibits buildings holds the printing and book binding exhibits. Here you may view methods of printing from the time of the Gutenberg press to the modern high powered machines.

Methods of book binding are also shown. There is a man who sits binding books by hand, and there is a machine that does many times the quantity of the hand work in a much shorter time.

Beautiful leather covers of books, tooled in gold, are some of the most striking things in the printing exhibit. Here the book lover glories in an art distinctly different from other branches of art.

Turning to an exhibit which is not as artistic as book binding, but just as important. All kinds of office machinery are on display in one section of the building. Nearly every type of cash register, typewriter, adding machine, and other office machinery is on display.

If ever a cash register could be beautiful and look enticing, the ones shown in the National Cash Register Company's exhibit turn the trick. These machines are made in molar, and some are silver plated. It should really be a thrill to deposit money in a machine like that. Oh! yes.

There is a large section in which exhibits of the oil industry are shown. Many oil companies have on display exhibits showing all the steps in the oil industry. Talking about products taken from the ground, there is also a model, which is large enough for people to stand up in, of a diamond mine. We have seen many women looking wistfully around, and wondering if any of the valuable "ice" was lying around unused.

If you miss everything else in the General Exhibits groups don't miss the photographic display on the second floor. All types of pictures are shown, and some of results gained by camera are really thrilling to see. Not only pictures of scenery are shown as is many times the case in displays of this sort, but photographs of buildings, sports, people, and machines are shown. One of the things in the Swedish building is a model of the City Hall in Stockholm. It is made of cedar and was carved by Aron Sandberg. All famous architects visiting the Fair have seen this, as the real building is supposed to be a masterpiece in the world of architecture.

Have you seen the newspaper published by the Midget Village at the Fair? It is of midget size, yet is of a model of our large "sheets." They are having a tight race for mayor of the village between a giant and a midget. The paper seems to be impartial, but we think it favors the "giant" reform party.

The paper has a sport page, a society section, and has even a stock market sheet. Such stocks as electric trains, roller skates, and candy are listed on the official exchange.

The press offices in the Administration building are truly an international center. Reporters from all over the world come there to write their stories. Men from Sweden, Czechoslovakia, India, Morocco, and many other far away places give this building a touch of international flavor.

Little Daughter: Why is father singing so much tonight?
 Mother: He is trying to sing the baby to sleep.
 Little Daughter: Well, if I was baby I'd pretend I was asleep. — Purple Parrot.

 DEERFIELD ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS

She does a perfect job on her children—

and she's equally good at lubricating a car

"Well," you say to yourself, "if she knows how to lubricate a car she's different from me. I don't know a spark-plug from a carburetor."

But the point, dear madam, is that she isn't different from you. Only she's discovered a secret—that lubricating a car, or inflating a tire, or checking a battery is very easy indeed once you know the address of the nearest Standard Station. You merely drive the car in and Cheerful Stan does the rest. He looks after the little things that women are supposed to know nothing about—from filling the radiator to changing the oil. The next time your husband says, "The car needs greasing but I don't see when I'm going to have it done," why don't you take the job off his hands? With Cheerful Stan's help you can do it quite as well as he can.
