WORTH WHILE THOUGHT

What is the thing of great value in life?
Sick people may say health. Poor people may say wealth. A person without a home says home.
We are all inclined to feel that the greatest thing in the world is something we haven't got.
But isn't one of the greatest things in the world for all of us the happiness that can come from being able to use all our talents in our daily work, plus a feeling of growth in ability?
That is at least a common sense answer—whether we work in the home, the factory, the office, the store, on the farm, or other outdoor labor.
Getting things done right and growth in ability is a deep desire of human desire.
Of great value to us is improvement in serving better who give us an opportunity to serve them.
