"How do you suppose,"
the Walrus said,
"They keep the floors so clean?"

The Walrus and the Carpenter were riding on the train. The Walrus said, "There's lots of things I wish that you'd explain: I ask you this because, you see, I know you got a brain. How can they make the tracks so smooth, that stretch out mile on mile? Why is it every passenger displays a beaming smile? Why do you never get a jolt and tumble in the aisle? How do they keep the floors so clean, the cushions just like new?" The Carpenter replied, "My friend, I know no more than you, but if you ride North Western trains, you'll find they always do!"
