Mrs. Ernest Byfield Shows How To Care For Car—By Proxy!

Mrs. Ernest Byfield is one of Chicago's most popular young matrons, and it is easy to see why. In her photograph, shown elsewhere in today's issue of this newspaper, the camera has admirably caught her fair, patrician beauty, the charm and graciousness of her manner. Her evening gown of white satin from the Misses Weathered Shop, its simplicity of contour broken only by two modest rhinestone clasps at the neckline and another at the waist—is perfectly suited to her type.

It is hard to imagine a young woman so faultlessly turned out for the evening concerning herself with such questions as greasing the car or testing its tires. But the modern lady of the house, thanks to the complexities of present-day life, does have responsibilities of that kind which her grandmother never dreamed of. Fortunately, she has learned how to cope with them with the least possible trouble.

Don't imagine for a moment that those soft hands ever thrust a dust cloth across a windshield or that a spot of oil ever mars that satin gown. Another, smaller photograph alongside Mrs. Byfield's gives the clue to the way in which all responsibility for the care of the car is disposed of by those who want to avoid the bother. It is a photograph of a Standard Oil service station attendant.

He is a great deal more than a mere dispenser of motor oil and gasoline. For example, he will gladly keep a record for you, in order to know when your car needs complete lubrication or when it is time to drain your crankcase and refill it with the proper grade of oil. He will cheerfully supply free air, for your tires and free water for your radiator. Deftly he wipes off the windshield and the windows, and in general makes himself unobtrusively helpful. And with it all he is smiling and courteous as well as efficient and dependable. More and more women are putting themselves wholeheartedly and confidently into his expert hands so far as keeping the car in shape is concerned.

It is for those who have not yet taken full advantage of this convenient service that the Standard Oil Company is running the current series of announcements, each one illustrated with the picture of a prominent young Chicago woman.

Next week, an attractive photograph of the popular Mrs. Janney Roby will appear.

To Address Lions Club Professor Bruce Lineburg, head of the biological department of Lake Forest College, will address the Highland Park Lions Club at their dinner meeting at the Moraine Hotel Thursday. Professor Lineburg is an expert on bees.

When a man of genius is in full swing, never contradict him, set him straight or try to reason with him. Give him a free field. A listener is sure to get a greater quantity of good, no matter how mixed, than if the man is thwarted.—Linnaeus.

The delusive idea that men merely toil and work for the sake of preserving their bodies, and procuring for themselves bread, houses, and clothes, is degrading and not to be encouraged. The true origin of man's activity and creativeness lies in his unceasing impulse to embody himself outside himself the divine and spiritual element within him.—Froebel

A man is an animal that writes.—Homer.
