Things To Cook

All in a Pickle
 Kitchens all over the land are sending out an incense that travels to one's very toes—the ravishing smells of chowchow and piccalilli, the perfume of peaches pickling in a cinnamon sirup, the aroma of golden watermelon rind preserves! About this time each year, provident homemakers look through the far-sighted end of a long telescope and see themselves five months hence searching for something to add sweetness and light to cold weather menus. Oh, for a blithe ray of August sunshine and September snap, when winter comes! That's where pickles and relishes come in.

Wholesome, home-made relishes made of fresh garden vegetables add the needed zest to almost every meat dish, roasts, chops, steaks, fish and fowl, and they aid digestion since their tart vinegar and brine bases stimulate the digestive juices and prepare the stomach for the meal. And how they tickle the taste-buds and make eating an enjoyment! The more jars and glasses of these things we make, the more dollars saved in the grocery budget this winter, for they spell real economy over a period of months.

Never are vegetables and fruits more adaptable and better priced for pickling than now. Little green tomatoes beg to be taken off the vine for tomato preserves and mustard pickles. From the sun-baked floors of August gardens, the larger, ripe tomatoes are pressing their own possibilities for raw tomato relish and chili sauce. Small hot peppers, sweet red peppers, large green peppers, ask us pepperily, "How about pepper hash?" Midget cucumbers, cauliflowerets, clusters of dill, and the tiny smooth white onions so delicious pickled whole, all speak their pieces from market stalls and truck gardens. Why should we resist, when a week of pickling means months of household thrift, color on cold-weather plates and tantalizing flavors for our palates.

Only fresh vegetables and fruits, preferably not more than 25 hours old, should be used for pickling. A treatment of salt water usually prepares them for preservation in brine or vinegar. White pickling vinegar is considered best for most pickles. Mint vinegar, something called for is made by pouring hot vinegar over crushed spearmint leaves and allowing to cool before pouring off for use. Bleached or soft pickles result from too strong a vinegar. Too much salt, sugar or vinegar makes pickles tough and shriveled. To assure a correct amount of vinegar, weigh the material to be pickled, use one-third its weight in vinegar, and weight the pickles so they are entirely covered with the vinegar and spices.

Pickled Cauliflower
 Steam heads of cauliflower as usual, making sure that they are steamed until just tender. Break cauliflower into small flowerets and put in glass jar. Fill the jar with the following pickle: Mix 1/2 pound of dry mustard with 1 tablespoon tumeric, dilute to a thin paste with white vinegar and stir into 2 quarts of scalding hot vinegar; stir until the liquid begins to thicken, then add a cup of sugar, half a cup of olive oil and 1 tablespoon of mustard seed; simmer 5 minutes and pour into jars. Seal.

Mustard Pickles
 1 qt. small cucumbers
 1 qt. large cucumbers
 1 qt. small onions
 1 large cauliflower
 2 green peppers

Brine:
 4 qts. water
 1 pt. salt

Dressing:
 1 cup flour
 1 tablespoon tumeric
 6 tablespoons mustard
 1 cup sugar

Vinegar:
 Pour brine solution over vegetables which have been cleaned, breaking cauliflower small and chopping green peppers fine. Let stand 24 hours. Heat enough to scald, turn into a colander and drain. Mix flour, tumeric, and mustard with enough vinegar to make a smooth paste. Add sugar and enough vinegar to make 2 quarts. Boil this mixture until smooth, stirring all the time. Add vegetables and cook until heated through. Pack and seal in glass jars.

Sweet Pickled Peaches, Peaches and Melon Rinds
 7 lbs. fruit
 5 lbs. sugar
 1 pt. vinegar
 1 cup water
 3 sticks cinnamon
 1/2 cup whole cloves

Remove the skins and blossom ends of peaches, retaining the stems. Scald peaches, to remove the skins, or pare them. Watermelon rind should not be too thin; cut away all pink pulp and the thin green rind on the outside. Keep peaches and pears whole, watermelon rind may be cut in squares, rounds, diamonds, etc. Make a syrup of the sugar, vinegar and water; skim and add the spices. Cook peaches and peaches until tender in the syrup, then place in fruit jars and pour the syrup, reduced by cooking, over them. Put the spices in the jars of fruit. Rinds need to be cooked in water until tender and then finished as the fruit.

Prairie View Band Wins Honors in Chicagoland Festival

The Chicago Tribune in announcing the winners at the Chicagoland Music Festival at Soldier's Field last Saturday evening contained the following about the Prairie View Band which won highest honors in adult bands of small units:

The Band Divisions
 Winners in the other band divisions were:
 Adult bands, small units: Prairie View Concert Band, of Prairie View, Ill., an organization of 28 pieces, representing a village of only 217 population. The band is directed by Lloyd Ritzenthaler.

Included in the personnel of this band are a great many from Highland Park and Deerfield.

It takes a great deal of boldness mixed with a vast deal of caution, to acquire a great fortune; but then it takes ten times as much wit to keep it after you have got it as it took to make it.—Mayer A. Rothschild.

The ruin of most men dates from some idle moment.—George S. Hillard.

He is not only idle who does nothing, but he is idle who might be better employed.—Socrates.

Every war is a national calamity whether victorious or not.—Gen. Von Moltke.

You can never have a greater or a less dominion than that over yourself.—Leonardo da Vinci.
