

Prof. Lindeman Talks At Lincoln School On The American Crisis

"We have as our heritage in America the ancient dream of working out our social destiny by consent, rather than by coercion. That dream, although it is still evoked so frequently, has become a mirage. It ceased to be true in the Jacksonian era, when power was momentarily wrested away from the vested interests, and placed again in the hands of the people, only to be followed immediately by what might be called a dictatorship."

This was one of the points brought out in the stirring address delivered by Eduard C. Lindeman, professor of philosophy at New York School of Social Work, last Tuesday evening at the Lincoln School.

With deep feeling apparent in his manner, Mr. Lindeman defined the nature of the crisis through which America is passing. He said, "A crisis is an historic epoch which calls for adjustments so fundamental that we must change many of our long-established habits. I see an underlying fear and timidity in the American people in the face of this great upheaval, and I predict that if the change is permitted to come thru revolution or force, that it will be the bloodiest the world has ever known. We must do everything in our power to prevent it. If only we can sustain our belief in education, if only we can revive the sense of freedom through education, if only we can develop a sense of social responsibility, we may stop this cataclysm in time."

Then Prof. Lindeman went on to say, "But in order to do that we must have a reevaluation in our ideals of education, and we must learn what true freedom means. All the people in this country must have the freedom to work, all the children in this country must have the freedom to attend school. If we want real freedom of competitive enterprise, we must see that with every increase in production there comes a corresponding increase in wages so that the extra amount of goods produced can be bought up by the people for whom it was produced. If there is to be true competitive freedom, we must really eliminate child labor. (In spite of codes under the NRA, there are still about one million children employed in industry.) In effect, if we choose the peaceful method of change, we must plan.

"And that involves a complete overhaul of our educational system. We need, not more colleges and vocational schools, but more schools of life, where young men and women go to learn the relation between their own personalities and the world about them. They must learn that difference is the essence of life, and that, as Goethe said, what one agrees with, leaves him unchanged. We only learn from those who are different from ourselves."

An enthusiastic audience of about 300 attended the lecture, which was sponsored by the Lincoln School P. T. A. and the Highland Park League of Women Voters. Prof. Lindeman is the author of numerous books on adult education and sociology. He is contributing editor of the New Republic, and president of the New Jersey State Conference on Social Work, among other things.

Fall Term of Dancing Will Begin on Oct. 12

Miss Terese O'Neil, who held her dancing classes at the Y.W.C.A. last year, is opening the 1934 season on Oct. 12 and will again hold her classes at the Y.

Miss O'Neil has been connected with Merriell Abbott, internationally known dance director, as assistant and associate in her professional work for the past 12 years. She is still associated with Merriell Abbott and will teach in Highland Park only one day each week; therefore her classes will have to be limited in size.

Miss O'Neil has studied dancing intensively in America and in Europe, and has a thorough knowledge of and teaches all types of dancing including ballet, tap, musical-comedy, acrobatic and modern German work. Miss O'Neil has classes for children of pre-school age with which she has been very successful. This season she is going to have a special late afternoon class for high school and college girls. Classes are being formed now and registrations are being accepted at the Y. W. C. A.

Miss O'Neil will be in Highland Park for registration on Friday, Oct. 5. Mothers wishing to talk with Miss O'Neil may call between the hours of 3 to 5 for an interview.

Grade School Clubs Hold First Meeting

Two parties this week marked the beginning of the fall term at the Y.W.C.A. for the 5th and 6th, and 7th and 8th grade school clubs. Entertainment consisted of songs and games, and refreshments were served. Many took advantage of this opportunity to meet new girls and renew old friendships. Plans for the programs throughout the year were discussed.

Girls from any school are invited. The 5th and 6th grade club meets on Tuesdays, the 7th and 8th grade club meets on Wednesdays from 4 to 5 o'clock.

Next Tuesday the younger group will take a "hobo hike" and each girl should bring a sandwich in a paper sack. The group will be home in time for dinner.

On Wednesday the older group will see high school girls set hair and manicure nails. Numbers will be drawn and several lucky girls will have their nails manicured free. If you were unable to attend the parties, plan to come to the meetings next Tuesday and Wednesday evening from 4 to 5 o'clock at the Y.W.C.A. Miss Ethel Skidmore is in charge of the work.
