This Week in Washington

Washington, D.C., June 8 — The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections has been giving consideration to the case of Senator-elect R. Ash D. Holt, of West Virginia, who was elected last November but has not taken the oath of office because he is not of Senatorial age, which the Constitution sets at 30 years. He will become of age on June 19. The Constitution stipulates three qualifications for United States Senator. First, he must be 30 years old. Second, he must be a resident of the State of which he is elected a representative. Third, he must have been a citizen of the United States for nine years. The main contention of the opposition to allowing Senator-elect Holt his seat is that he was not 30 years of age at the time of his election and was not, therefore, eligible at that time and was not eligible at the time the term of office for which he was elected began on January 3. In support of the argument against the seating of Holt the case of Gen. James Shields is cited. Gen. Shields was elected to the United States Senate from the State of Illinois for the term commencing March 4, 1849. Upon his appearance to take his seat the question of his eligibility was raised on the grounds that he had not been a citizen of the United States the nine years required by the Constitution. It appears that he met the citizenship requirements at the time he presented himself to the Senate for his seat but did not meet that requirement at the time of his election. The Senate declared his election void. On the other hand the supporters of Senator-elect Holt point out that Henry Clay, of Kentucky, became Senator when he was only 29 years of age. But it appears that the Senate did not raise any question as to the seating of Clay, for there does not seem to be any record of the case coming before the Senate at all.

Most of the important legislative work of a Congress, both in the House and Senate, is done by the committees. In order for the House or Senate to consider a bill it must be reported by the committee having jurisdiction over it. It is a rare instance where a bill which a particular committee refuses to report has come to the floor under the "discharge rule" whereby 218 signatures on a petition will discharge a committee and automatically place the bill in question on the House Calendar. The longer a member serves in Congress the higher his rank on the committee and the chairmanship of the committee goes to the member of the majority party who has the longest service on that committee. A chairman of a committee is in a very powerful and influential position.

In the present Congress a large number of the chairmanships of the important committees are held by Members of Congress from the South. The reasons are: First, the Majority Party is Democratic and, secondly, it seems to be the practice of the southern states to reelect their representatives. The result is that the southern states wield a great influence.

John J. McSwain, of South Carolina, chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, is having difficulty with "delivering" his committee for the proposed Tennessee Valley Authority amendments, which the Administration is desirous of having enacted. The bill, which enlarges the power of the TVA passed the Senate, but by a vote of 13 to 12 the House committee tabled the measure and refused to report it. Speaker John W. Byrns has interviewed some of the insurgent Democrats on the committee who refuse to vote for the bill, but they seem to remain firm in opposition.

Chairman McSwain has stated that he intended conferring with the President with a view to introducing a compromise TVA bill designed to win the opponents' vote.

It represents an outstanding example of the power of committees in legislative procedure, where a small group of Representatives have stopped the "enlargement of the New Deal in the Tennessee Valley." Moreover, the reports are that Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, Chairman of Interstate and Foreign Commerce committee, is experiencing difficulty with his committee in connection with the public utility holding company bill. The New Deal may again have to compromise to have the measure reported.

The Senate has devoted the week to debating the controversial public utility holding company bill. Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, is fighting to get the Administration's bill through without amendments and Senator Daniel O. Hastings, Republican, of Delaware, is leading the opposition.

By a vote of 265 to 121 the House passed a bill providing for a "skeltonized" continuation of the NRA until April of next year. The measure was literally rushed through under a special rule.

SCOUTERS REPORT PROGRESS AT CAMP
The seven Scouters who have been at Camp Ma-Ka-Ja-Wan for the last week and a half have been sending in accounts of their activities and report that they have been "working up to schedule" and are accomplishing all that they set out to accomplish. They have been cleaning and burning brush and windfall, been lining the trails with white birch logs, have been repairing coats, setting kitchens and dining hall equipment in order, have been painting boats and a number of other items in preparation for the coming summer's activities. A good deal of the work which would ordinarily have been done by the "set up gang" will have already been completed by the time the camp staff arrives in camp, the middle of next week, and it will be a simple matter of completing the work of setting up the tents and the other items necessary to put the camp in readiness.

DOCTOR D. D. SALTON TO BE CAMP DIRECTOR
Dr. D. D. Salton of the University hospital in Ann Arbor, Michigan, has recently made arrangements to attend Camp Ma-Ka-Ja-Wan as its resident camp doctor. Dr. Salton is a resident of the University hospital, specializing in neurology. He will be at camp beginning the morning of June 24th when the camp opens, and will live in camp for the entire six weeks. Dr. Salton will take care of all minor injuries and if any sickness should arise he will also take care of patients. Camp is equipped with a hospital with four beds and other equipment to take care of emergencies.

CAMP DIRECTORY TO BE FEATURED AT MA-KA-JA-WAN
A camp directory containing the names of all Scouts in camp will be erected close to the main dock so that all campers and visitors can at a glance tell where all Scouts are living in camp. It will be divided into six sections, one section for each village and not only will the boys' names be listed but their progress during their camp may be checked up daily so that Scouts may see how they are advancing. The board will be six feet high and ten feet long.
