

4TH of JULY SPECIALS

Gone are the pink lemonade, the greased pig and political orations of yesterday. All that remains of the old-fashioned Fourth are the fried chicken and ice cream.

But now we can put some fireworks in the menu, whether the plan is for a picnic away from home or for a gala supper for the children on the lawn or porch. If at home, the party should by all means be out of doors and fill that period of suspense between late afternoon and early darkness, or "fireworks time."

Be safe as you like about your culinary "fireworks" but not too safe! For instance, if you're serving hot biscuits with the chicken and the children want sandwiches, too—have sandwiches. Have starting table decorations, because people expect to be startled on the Fourth of July. A giant firecracker that looks as if it would rock the Empire State Building if it were ever set off, makes a fine table centerpiece. It's a dupe, of course, just a hollow cylinder of cardboard covered with red crepe paper and twisted at the upper end, with a fuse issuing forth. The firecracker might contain a variety of favors for each guest, noise makers, paper hats, balloons, attached to red, white and blue ribbons which issue out of the firecracker and terminate at the guests' places.

Punch may be as spectacular as a roman candle, with decorated ice cubes and flavorful fragments of sliced bananas, pineapple, maraschino cherries, lemon, lime, orange and mint, all frosty cold.

Little bundles of "firecrackers" tied with patriotic ribbon make appropriate favors. At the children's party these may be stick candy twisted in red paper, with artificial fuses. For the grown-ups, cigarettes may be similarly disguised.

With fried chicken on the Fourth goes scalloped potatoes or French cream potato salad given below, feathery little biscuits with red jelly, pickled peaches, a red, white and blue salad and a gala dessert from the refrigerator. Ice cream or any white frozen dessert can be given on a holiday air by serving in blue paper souffle cups with a bright dash of raspberry or strawberry sauce, and a small silk flag placed in the center.

Red, white and blue salad is made with halved pears placed hollow side up on lettuce. Fill centers with fresh blueberries. Pipe around the edges of pears with pastry tube a ribbon of cream cheese and outside the cheese place a row of red raspberries.

French Cream Potato Salad
4 cups diced boiled potatoes
3 stalks celery
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 cup vinegar
3 tablespoons chopped onion
2 teaspoons salt
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/2 pint sweet cream
2 tablespoons butter

Cut celery in small pieces and mix with potatoes; add the minced onion, salt, pepper and paprika. Allow to stand for 15 minutes. Heat the cream and butter, until butter is melted. Pour over potato mixture, stirring with a fork, so that the potatoes will not be mashed. Store in refrigerator. Serve cold.

Rhubarb Parfait
1/2 cup unsweetened rhubarb juice
1/2 cup sugar
3 egg whites
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup cooked rhubarb pulp
1/4 cup crushed pineapple
1 cup heavy cream, whipped stiff

Cook rhubarb with very little water and no sugar, then strain for the rhubarb juice. Measure and cook with the sugar to the thread stage, then immediately pour slowly into the stiffly beaten egg whites, beating constantly while pouring. Continue heating until cool, then add salt, cooked rhubarb pulp and pineapple, both well drained. Add also a drop or two of red vegetable coloring unless the pink rhubarb is used. Fold in whipped cream, blend thoroughly, turn into refrigerator tray and freeze, stirring the mixture once during the freezing. Serves four to six.

A TRIBUTE TO DEERFIELD'S CENTENNIAL

Congratulations to you, citizens of Deerfield, for your splendid centennial celebration. No one viewing that picturesque parade headed by the unique figure of Indian Clark, the nimble footed Indians, and Father Marquette, the pioneers in their ox-drawn covered wagon, could fail to catch the spirit of those far-away days of a hundred years ago. No one who was lucky enough to get a glimpse of your gorgeous pageant, could fail to understand the reason for holding centennials.

We, who stood on the sidelines, join with you in gratitude to those dear departed souls who endured so much that we might have more. We are proud, with you, of those sturdy men and women who established the little settlement of Deerfield.

The historical exhibit was a surprise and delight to all. It would be impossible to mention all the articles exhibited. Space does not permit.

There were historic documents, including a letter written by Daniel Webster; there were coopers' tools, Indian arrow heads, clothes worn by adults, children, and small babies of long ago, old photographs of our first settlers, old newspapers, dishes, guns, priceless patchwork quilts and hand woven lace, etc.

A room furnished as in pioneer days contained the old fireplace with its spinning wheel and reel, the old clock, the grandfather's chair, the what-not. An old organ standing against the wall was used to furnish old-time favorite music in the afternoons.

The Sunday afternoon Vesper service which closed the centennial celebration, was held in the grove on the pageant site. Dr. Horace Smith of Garrett Biblical Institute, the speaker of the afternoon, delivered a most appropriate and enjoyable address on "The Work of the Church in the Building Up of a Community."

The centennial has passed into history. We rejoice with you in work well done and we are satisfied—richer in the knowledge and spirit of the past. We look forward in the hope that we may not lose the vision that prompts us to do and dare, and that we, too, may "carry on." Once more, congratulations!

Much of the success of our pageant production is due to the genius of our director, Miss Phyllis Seago. Possessing first of all a charming personality, an amazing propensity for surmounting difficulties, and an untiring devotion to her art, she has built up a background of rich experience in the field of her chosen profession. Miss Seago is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma, with degrees of A.B. and B.F.A., in dramatic art. Her university sent her out with the Universal Producing Company as director, where she gained recognition because of her talent. From there she went to the publicity staff of the Globe Theatre in the English Village at "A Century of Progress Exposition" in Chicago. At present she is broadcasting over station WCFL as "Rose" in the "Baxter Sisters." Her work with the Deerfield centennial pageant deserves our warmest praise and we feel fortunate in having obtained her services.

The pageant committee wishes to acknowledge appreciation to the following organizations for splendid co-operation and service: Village Board of Trustees, West Deerfield Township Officials, Woman's Club of Deerfield, Deerfield Chamber of Commerce, Deerfield Rotary Club, American Legion Auxiliary, American Legion, Deerfield Parent Teacher Association, Royal Neighbors, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Novelty Quintet, Public Service Company, Deerfield-Shields High School, the Deerfield Grammar School, American Red Cross, U. S. Army Band, Commonwealth Edison Drum and Bugle Corps, Highwood Junior Legion Drum and Bugle Corps, Jewett Riding Academy, Deerfield Association Club.

Grateful acknowledgement is also made to the many individuals who gave of financial help and personal services.—Contributed.

D. A. R. Better Films Committee Review

July 4-5, Thursday and Friday—Ralph Bellamy in "Air Hawks" an exciting drama of airports, rival air companies and a "death ray" used by one airline to destroy the ships of another in an attempt to put it out of business. Pathos, tragedy, humor and romance are combined in a convincing and strongly dramatic story, exceptionally well photographed. Adults and young adults.

July 6, Saturday, "One Sunday Afternoon," featuring Gary Cooper. This picture is a very sincere and rather touching little study of an egotistical small town boy whose life had been embittered when he was jilted by the village belle that he could not appreciate the staunch and loving wife who married him to save his pride. There are plenty of funny situations to balance the pathos and the picture leaves a pleasant memory. Family.

July 7-8-9, Sunday, Monday Tuesday, "The Edding Night," Gary Cooper and Anna Sten. Unable to write because of the frivolous life he and his wife have been leading, an author goes to his Connecticut home-stead and finds in a neighbor Polish farm girl a love that brings both inspiration and tragedy. Consistent character portraiture and romantic beauty—with the colorful life among Polish immigrants realistically presented. Adults.

July 10-11, Wednesday and Thursday: "Star of Midnight" with Ginger Rogers and Wm. Powell. A very smart, highly polished mystery comedy with an involved but cleverly sustained and adroitly solved plot. An actress, star of the play, "Midnight," suddenly disappears, thus setting a match to a train of events that includes tragedy. Excellent acting and directing makes the most of the story. Adults.

Dante A. Club Plans Picnic for July 14

Members of the Dante A. Club are invited to attend a picnic given by the club on Sunday, July 14. Free transportation to the picnic grounds will be provided from 126 High Street at 2:30 p.m.

A feature of the picnic will be the presentation of a prize to the members who sold the most tickets to the club's show last April. Dancing and other entertainment will also be provided. Members planning to attend are asked to signify their intention by calling Highland Park 148 or informing the club secretary, Chester Tomel.
