

45-Mile Limit Not Dead—Only Sleeping

The 45-mile-an-hour prima facie speed limit on state highways, repealed by the legislature, is not dead but is only sleeping. The state may, in its discretion, put it in force again and require motorists to drive accordingly, says Carl A. Barrett, president of the Illinois Automobile Club.

With the repeal of that provision in the Illinois law, motorists are now permitted to drive at any speed on state highways, providing they do so at a rate that is "reasonable and proper having regard to the traffic and use of the way" and so as not to "endanger the life or limb or injure the property of any person."

However, the new Illinois Traffic Code, now in full force and effect, empowers the state to reimpose, at any time it sees fit, the old 45-mile-an-hour prima facie speed limit on state highways, or even a lower speed if deemed proper.

Section 49 (d) of the code—the same section that removes the 45 mile an hour limit—says:

"Whenever the department (meaning the State Department of Public Works and Buildings) shall determine upon the basis of an engineering traffic investigation that any prima facie speed upon any state highway, under its jurisdiction, as hereinbefore set forth, is greater or less than is reasonable and safe under conditions found to exist at any intersection or other place or upon any part of a highway, said department shall determine and declare a reasonable and safe prima facie speed limit thereat which shall be effective when appropriate signs giving notice thereof are erected at such intersections or other place or part of the highway, but in no instance shall the speed exceed 45 miles per hour."

Governor Horner, in his message vetoing the McSweeney Bill (H. B. 56) which repealed the 45 miles per hour provision in the Motor Vehicle Law, expressed his opposition to the removal of this prima facie limit on the state highways. The director of the Department of Public Works and Buildings is appointed by the Governor, as is also the chief highway engineer, in charge of the Division of Highways, a bureau under the department.

Under the powers granted in Section 49 (d)—quoted above—the department may at any time survey the state highways and bring in a report that unlimited speed on those highways is too fast to be reasonable and proper having regard to the traffic and the use of the way. Thereupon the department could "determine," upon the basis of that survey, that a lower speed was necessary and, upon the erection of proper traffic signs giving notice of such speed limitation, the rate set on those signs would be the law.

Section 49 (d) goes further and says that if such a change is made in no instance shall the speed exceed 45 miles per hour.

Accordingly, any change made by the department could not exceed that rate, thereby re-establishing the 45 mile an hour prima facie speed limit on all state highways.

"The question of speed on state highways in Illinois appears to be entirely within the discretion of the Department of Public Works and Buildings, under the direction of the Governor," commented Mr. Barrett. "If it is found that unlimited speed is beneficial, the new law will probably be allowed to remain; but, if it is found that motorists abuse it, the state is in position to clamp down and return to the old rate."

"This new unlimited speed law is, in effect, on probation; it is an experiment, and if Illinois motorists want it they should operate under it with discretion."

Guide Lecture Tours at Field Museum

A guide-lecture tour for the general public on "Minerals and Prehistoric Exhibits" will be presented at Field Museum of Natural History at 11 a. m., Friday, Aug. 2. On Monday at the same hour there will be a tour covering "Plant Life Exhibits"; Tuesday, "Primitive and Civilized Peoples"; and Wednesday, "Animals." On Thursday morning, and all five afternoons at 3 o'clock, there will be general tours of anthropological, botanical, geological, and zoological exhibits. These tours, conducted by staff lecturers, are open to all museum visitors without charge. Parties assemble inside the north entrance.

High School Students To Be Instructed in Avoiding Tuberculosis

To inform high school students as to how they may protect themselves from tuberculosis, the Illinois Tuberculosis Association is making plans to begin educational work in a number of Illinois high schools with the opening of the term in September, it was announced today.

High death rates from tuberculosis exist in the age group 15 to 25, the association has found. Special instruction will be given regarding the symptoms, methods of transmission and prevention of the disease.

A number of county tuberculosis organizations have applied to the Illinois Tuberculosis Association for the services of trained educational workers to conduct a campaign in the schools of those counties, according to W. P. Shahan, executive secretary.

Arrangements have been made in some high schools for an address before the assembly, while in others the worker will teach health and hygiene classes for several sessions. Appropriate literature will accompany those illustrated talks.

"Our purpose in giving special instruction to high school students is two-fold. First of all, we hope to be able to reduce the number of deaths among adolescents. Inasmuch as these boys and girls are the citizens and parents of the future, early familiarity with the facts concerning this disease should eventually lead to a reduction of tuberculosis in the next generation," Shahan said.

For a number of years the high school group was referred to by tuberculosis workers as "the neglected age." Educational campaigns such as The Modern Health Crusade were in operation for grade school children, talks were being made before adult groups of all types, but no special material had been prepared for high school students. The instruction to be given by the Illinois Tuberculosis Association has been arranged especially for adolescents and will tie in with regular courses being taught in the schools.

Lawn Party Aug. 8 at Miss Heman's

Miss Loretta Heman will give a lawn card party on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 8, at her home on Waukegan Road, for the benefit of the Altar and Rosary Society of the Deerfield Holy Cross Church. Assisting hostesses will be Mrs. Earl Frost and Mrs. Leslie Bohrens. The community is invited.

Last Friday a similar party was given by Mrs. Thomas Mooney and Mrs. Eugene Zahle, which was held on the Mooney lawn. It was a delightful affair.

Funeral Rites Friday for Frank G. Hoyne

Funeral services for Frank Gilbert Hoyne, who died Wednesday, July 24, at his home, 419 Lake avenue, were held Friday at 3 p. m., at Trinity Episcopal Church on Laurel Avenue, with the Rev. Christoph A. Keller conducting the services.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Florence Ashton Hoyne, and two daughters, Leonora Temple Hoyne, and Helen Hoyne Healy.

Monument To Honor Lincoln-Douglas Debates

The great debates between Lincoln and Douglas are to be memorialized in a monument, the appropriation for which has just been authorized by Governor Horner.

Of this plan the Quincy Herald says: "Quincy's experience in building the George Rogers Clark monument ought to be valuable in our plans for the Lincoln-Douglas marker. . . . Several designs of models were prepared by the late Charles J. Mulligan, then head of the sculpture department of the Art Institute of Chicago. From the models a selection was made and additional ground was secured to give the monument an appropriate background. For this an additional expense of $9,000 was incurred. It is recalled that the monument was unveiled in May, 1909, two years after the appropriation was made."

The movement to commemorate the Lincoln-Douglas debates will recall the chaotic times our country was in just before the Civil War. The decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case stirred the country deeply. Fred Scott was a negro slave. His master had moved from Illinois, where legally he was free, to Missouri, where by law he again became a slave. Scott sued for his freedom and the Supreme Court decided he was not a citizen of the United States but a piece of property. The decision was momentous because the admission of all new states and territories depended upon whether they were to be admitted as free slave states. If therefore, slave owners could claim their slaves as property, they could move into the new territory and settle it as slave states.

Lincoln, who was then becoming prominent as an opponent of the extension of slavery was nominated by his constituents to oppose Stephen A. Douglas, who favored admitting the new states as slave states if they so voted. Both men agreed to debate the issue, and they did so in a number of towns in Illinois in the 1858. Of this period Carl Schurz says: "As soon as Lincoln realized that the slavery question has been thrust into politics, he plunged into an arduous study of all its legal, historical and moral aspects and his mind became a complete arsenal of argument." Lincoln lost the senatorship but the debate made him known as the foremost champion of anti slavery and secured for him the nomination to the presidency. Douglas was nominated by the northern wing of the Democrats and Breckenridge by the southern wing. It is understood that the decision was not a citizen of the United States but a piece of property. The decision was momentous because the admission of all new states and territories depended upon whether they were to be admitted as free slave states. If therefore, slave owners could claim their slaves as property, they could move into the new territory and settle it as slave states.

1,484,624 Motor Licenses Are Issued in First Six Months

The number of automobile and truck licenses issued this year by Edward Hughes, secretary of state, is greater than for any year since the automobile license law went into effect.

The registration to June 30, 1935 is as follows:

Passenger cars	1,227,404
Trucks	171,161
Chauffeurs	89,166
Dealers	3,653
Trailers	9,168
Motorcycle	4,072
Total	1,484,624

With the reduction of fees under the new law which is now in effect, it is anticipated that license fees will greatly increase next year.
