

500 BACK ON RELIEF WITH IERC CLOSING

the WPA complete the work on these projects, while those not yet submitted are now being prepared for presentation. The need for work and the desire to finish all improvements started cause the local administration officials to look for early approval of the projects submitted according to Gurney.

Five projects which provide goods for families on relief will be continued at least temporarily after the Saturday shutdown, IERC officials stated. The making of clothing by workers on relief, the distribution of commodities, the manufacture of 1270 wool comforters, the care of subsistence gardens, and canning the produce from these gardens for distribution to families on relief will be continued indefinitely, according to Gurney and the IERC officials.

But, it was pointed out, these few tasks will employ but a very small percentage of the 500 people now engaged in work relief. For the most part, those who have been working regularly will be returned to direct relief until WPA approval for the resumption of work can be secured from Washington.

Meanwhile, IERC officials are now making preparations for five canning stations throughout the county, which will prepare the garden produce for distribution to families on relief. During the summer, members of these families have cultivated subsistence gardens throughout Lake County, and the crops raised to avoid waste of this material that are now ready for processing. It is IERC officials' permitted the canning project to be maintained until all produce is taken care of.

That the Saturday shutdown will affect only 500 people in Lake County results from the fact that gradual eliminations from work relief rolls have been made by IERC officials, since last May. At that time, there were 2,159 people on work relief, but the May closing of IERC, which was temporary, resulted in a considerable cut at that time. Prior to a month ago, there were about 150 people on the rolls, but the slashing at that time of IERC administration expenses necessitated the reduction of the relief work lists to the present figure.

Berksons Present Gift To the Field Museum

A collection of ethnological objects from Dutch Guiana, South America, recently presented to Field Museum of Natural History, by Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Berkson of Highland Park, is of special interest because it shows the survival of Negro crafts that have persisted in the West Indies and Guiana since the importation of slaves from West Africa several centuries ago.

According to Wilfrid D. Hamby, assistant curator of African ethnology, research has indicated that much of the culture of West Africa, such as folklore, magical practices, religious beliefs, and artistic designs, has survived in parts of the Western Hemisphere despite a foreign and hostile environment.

Included in the gift are a barrel-shaped drum with a pegged membrane, and a stool which has a decorative design in the form of a figure eight. Both of these are characteristic of African art, Mr. Hamby states. Among other objects are a stirrer and spoon carved from one piece of wood in such a manner that they are joined together by four wooden links. This could be matched in West Africa as far south as Zululand. A typically African wooden hair comb is also included.

"These objects provide an impressive example of the vitality of a culture even when the roots of that culture are torn from their native soil," Mr. Hamby comments.

Suspect Escapes from Jail in Highwood

Highwood police picked up a man on suspicion Monday night who gave his name as John Lay, and said he was from Indiana and 21 years old. He was placed in jail for the night or until a check could be made upon him.

Tuesday morning Chief of Police Frank Fink thought that the prisoner was unnaturally quiet and investigated, only to find that the prisoner had departed during the night. The description of Lay has been sent throughout the county and along the shore. He wore a light grey suit, and no hat and stood about 5 feet 7 inches tall. He is believed to be an ex-convict.

Public Service Official Praises Local Police

Members of the Highland Park Police department were complimented by the Public Service company last week for their quick action in providing efficient protection for wires blown down in the severe storm which swept Highland Park on Monday, August 19. Ed Sheehan, Public Service official, stated that the prompt action by local officers made it possible to restore service in a much shorter time than would otherwise have been possible and prevented the occurrence of accidents which can so easily be the outcome of exposed wires.
