

This Week in Washington

Washington, D.C., Aug. 24th
In all probability by the time this is published Congress will have adjourned.

If adjournment is realized tonight, this session will have lasted 233 days, which is well beyond the average length of a Congressional session.

One of the clerks in the House in charge of the records told me that there have been 190 quorum calls and roll call votes thus far this session and there are eight of us of the full membership of 435 members who have not failed to answer to our name and vote.

Although the theme song is "Home Sweet Home," to the average member of Congress adjournment means only a recess from the committee meetings and the floor debates.

During this rush week several rather unusual incidents occurred on the floor of the House.

The public utility holding company bill with the "death sentence" provision has been one of the big "must's" on the President's program.

As soon as Representative Rayburn entered his motion, he read a letter to the House from the President and the Speaker delivered an address appealing to the membership to accept the offered substitute and enact the legislation.

On Thursday another rather unusual incident occurred. The House was considering a bill which authorized an expenditure of $370,000,000 for the purposes of flood control.

Snelton Bros. Get Government Contract

Snelton Brothers, prominent well contractors of Glenview and Northbrook, have just been awarded U. S. Government contract for the construction of seven water wells at nearby Forest Preserves.

Having recently added two new No. 71 Speed-Star drilling machines to their equipment of truck mounted machines, Snelton Brothers are said to be the best equipped well drillers on the North Shore.

DUNES PARK TO BE KEPT OPEN ALL YEAR

Park Offers Various Sports as Well as Opportunity to Observe Wild Life

The new Dunes Park of Illinois—North Shore's 1500-acre playground on Lake Michigan between Waukegan and the Wisconsin state line—will remain open throughout the entire year.

Hikers and campers who wish to enjoy the full wild life there, and later, winter outdoor fans who seek a new place to skate, tramp, and adventure will be welcomed in the big park, which is proving one of the most popular recreation spots in Illinois.

Winter visitors there last season enjoyed the skating on Dead river, hiking through the big pine forest and along the four-mile beach. The park has been made into a game preserve, so that no hunting, which was popular there until recently, will be allowed.

The total number of visitors who have explored the new playground since its opening is approaching the 100,000 mark, Stephen Hotham, manager, announced.

Illinois with only 10,000 acres of state parks at present, will acquire the last available tract of land of its kind on Lake Michigan, if purchase plans materialize.
