DEERFIELD SCHOOL
Fourth Grade Jingles
I made a little man of snow,
Which nearly always melts, you know.
Or do you like the caribou
That gives you fat for fuel?
I made a little snow man—Norma Jacobs.
He was the cutest thing
He stayed with me all winter
Until way in the spring.
My snowman is a jolly fellow
He's made of pure white snow.
And all he does is kick and goo.
My jolly snowman, Alfredo.—Lucy Hasfield.

Seventh Grade
During our study of newspapers, in English class this week, we decided to write editorials expressing our opinions on school problems. Following is one of the editorials:
School Tidiness
The school building should be kept clean. The children can help to keep it clean by cleaning their shoes before they come into the school building. They should not throw paper, orange and banana peels on the floor, but should put them into the waste basket.

The room can be kept clean if all the boys and girls keep their desks in order. Each desk should be cleaned at least once a week. If each child would keep his hair combed it would improve the looks of the room. Each child should keep his hands clean and the boys should keep their shirts looking tidy. The girls too, should keep their dresses tidy. If all this was done, the school would look very clean and would keep clean.—by LaVon Davis.

The eighth grade class elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Grace Herman; vice president, Arthur Seiferle; secretary, Mary Frances Anderson.

LINCOLN SCHOOL
Old Southern Plantation, built by 5th grade.

Mrs. Harvey's 5th grade have been studying the southern colonial states. They have built a large plantation of colonial times. First they got a piece of beaver board seven feet in diameter to build different parts of the grounds.

One committee made an attractive cracker box mansion. Attached to the left side of the mansion was a long shed. It was divided into three sections. The one nearest the house, was the kitchen, next came the stables and last of all was the jail for the unruly servants.

Another committee made the grounds out of paper pulp. They made this by soaking newspapers in water until it was all pulpy, then they spread it every place there was ground.

Another committee made the trees and shrubbery. The shrubbery was made out of sponges painted green. The trees are of a variety, the evergreens are just evergreen branches pinned in the paper pulp.

A tree or twig was made into a live oak by hanging real Florida moss from the branches. A holly tree was made by picking barberry bush berries and putting them on a twig with paper leaves. For grass they dyed some sawdust and put it on the dry paper pulp. Plain sawdust was used for sand.

The house was supposed to be on the shore of the Atlantic ocean. They represented the water by painting the bare beaver board blue.

Another committee made the cotton fields by pasting balls of cotton on twigs. These were placed in even rows.

The cultivation around the "roots" of the plants was cleverly represented by leaving the paper pulp bare and rough.

Just opposite the cotton field is a tobacco field. Crepe paper of different colors represented the different stages of growth. Dark green represented the young tobacco plant. Next light green was used to represent the tobacco when ready to pick. Brown paper was used to represent the picked tobacco ready for smoking.

The servants quarters were made of ordinary Lincoln logs. Making the people, was a hard job. The boys and girls made the figures out of pipe cleaners and dressed them with clothes. Like the typical old homes the largest negro was shown dragging the Yule log in to be burned. Since it was so near Christmas a holly wreath was made ready, (of paper).

The legend was that if the Yule log didn't burn for twelve days after the youngest person, black or white, had lighted the fire, bad luck was supposed to attend the whole family.

The 7th grade visited the 5th grade and found the whole thing very interestingly done.—Bill Duck-er, Grade 7.

Festival of Foods at Palmer House

Finishing touches are being put this week on the 'Festival of Foods,' which is all set for its grand opening next Monday (January 20) in the big exhibition hall of the Palmer House.

Officially known as the International Food Show and Home Equipment exposition, the event will have many novel features in addition to its value from an educational standpoint and its objective of giving housewives in the Chicago area a better idea of what it means to be really "food conscious."

Among the spectacular features just announced by Frank Kennedy, managing director of the show, will be a "Parade of Fashions."

"Some people may wonder what fashions have to do with food," explains Mr. Kennedy. "However, there is a very close connection. The idea is that if a woman eats correctly she can wear stylish clothes and look well in them. In other words, proper diet makes it possible to keep one's figure."
