

The New Books Conducted by Felicete Buhl

A TIME FOR LOVE
by Romona Herdman
For those who like their fiction well written but light, naughty but not raw I highly recommend this first novel of definite promise. Romona Herdman writes with a gentle touch the story of a man who never had time to be happy. Torn between love for his mistress and respect for his wife and daughter he finally yields to his love but lacks the courage and opportunity to culminate his very prosaic marriage.

In the last analysis his relationship with all whose lives he touched was incomplete.

THE HURRICANE
by Nordoff and Hall
The authors of MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY have done it again! How rare it is to find a book which one knows that everyone will enjoy to its final word. This is a book filled with such force of action, such powerful beauty of description that—well this is positively one of those must books that, no matter what your tastes, you will assuredly not regret putting this at the very head of your reading list.

THE HURRICANE is a modern story of one of the small islands of the Low Archipelago. The serenity of this island paradise is shattered by the return of a native son, Terangi, an escaped convict. In the hue and cry the white men and the natives are brought into subtle opposition. But the issue is decided not by man but by nature, for there sweeps down upon the island a storm, overpowering, inhuman, majestic—a hurricane which tests the strength and temperament of these different races to the breaking point.

Lincoln Colcord in the New York Herald Tribune BOOKS says of this powerful tale "Since Stevenson laid down his pen, I do not remember a piece of fiction with such pure outline or such a hold on the imagination."

FREEDOM, FAREWELL
by Phyllis Bentley
FREEDOM, FAREWELL is both a first-rate romance and an authentic account of real happenings. It is a story of one of the most exciting, dramatic and far-reaching events in history.

Miss Bentley tells of the adventurous youth of Julius Caesar the realist, Cassus the plutocrat and Pompey the general, of their rise to power and of the quarrels and adjustments between them.

FREEDOM, FAREWELL is a story for every reader who enjoys thrilling action and well drawn characters. Incidentally, as a truthful picture of the downfall of liberty in a great nation its significance for the world today is abundantly clear.

Modenese Society Holds Anniversary Banquet

A large number of people participated at the anniversary banquet held by the Modenese Mutual Aid society, Sunday, Feb. 23, at the Masonic temple, in Highland Park. As the banquet was a celebration of the society's 29th anniversary and also a tribute of honor to its founders, several persons gave interesting speeches about the beginning of the society and the marked progress made by it.

The applause were frequent and reached the highest climax when the present president, Valerio Zagnoli, introduced the first president of the society, Carlo Carami, who was the guest of honor. Other speakers who praised the beneficial work which the organization is carrying out were the following: Mr. Egidio V. Mocoorni, treasurer of the society; Mr. Sante Pasquesi, toastmaster; Dr. Robert R. Jacks, physician of the society; Mr. John O. Meyers, mayor of Highland, and Mr. William M. Dooley, mayor of Highland Park.

Musical entertainment was given by a few local talented young people. Miss Alma Galassini accompanied with the piano Miss Gloria Linari, who, on account of singing very nicely, was requested by the audience to sing two more songs than were scheduled.

The trio composed of Valerio Ori, violinist; Jim Minorini, mandolinist, and Pete Fabbri, accordionist, played two numbers.

The members of the committee in charge of the celebration feel that their object of satisfying the participants seems to have been accomplished, and they desire to thank all who have co-operated toward this end.

New Secrets of the Suretel H. Ashton Wolfe tells of many astounding experiences in the Underworld of Paris. See the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with NEXT SUNDAY'S CHICAGO HERALD AND EXAMINER.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON by Ralph E. Church Representative, 10th Congressional District

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29—When a member of the minority party publicly criticizes the administration, the majority party invariably answers that it is simply "politics." No doubt such an answer serves to mitigate the seriousness of the criticism. The public is naturally inclined to believe, and not without justification in a great many instances, that the charge is nothing more than an attempt to make political fodder out of what is in reality an insignificant event.

Quite likely the administration could fairly successfully defend itself with the public against the criticism it has been receiving this week for the removal of Major General Johnson Hagood from his command were it not that members of both parties in Congress have expressed concern. It has been made a political issue, to be sure; but the criticism for the removal has crossed party lines.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, Democrat, of Texas, called it an "infamous and inexcusable outrage" that an officer with 35 years of service should be "ordered home" because he told a subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations that Works Progress Administration funds were "stage money." It is reported that Representative Blanton, Speaker Joseph W. Byrnes, Democrat, of Tennessee, and John J. McSwain, Democrat, of South Carolina (Chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs) called upon the officials of the War Department last Thursday to urge that the Department alter its order.

General Hagood is 64 years of age and would be automatically retired next year, after 35 years of service, at $5,333 per year. Within some two months he would be the ranking officer on duty with the United States Army with the exception of the Chief of Staff himself. His removal from duty because of his critical statements of the spending policy of the administration to the House Committee has caused one of the bitterest disputes in Congress this session.

When Major General Hagood appeared before the committee on Dec. 17, 1935, he stated that he had been told by Chief of Staff that he was "perfectly free to express any opinions or answer any question that may be asked by this committee." In the course of his testimony the General called WPA funds "stage money," because "you can pass it around, but you cannot get anything out of it in the end." He said that "there is a vast quantity of WPA money which is very easy to get for trifling projects but almost impossible to get for anything worthwhile. . . . One man can be taught to collect postage stamps while another man can be encouraged to take an interest in butterflies. Under the WPA I can get $200 to build a gravel walk to the garden house, but I cannot get $10 to repair a 'busted' steam pipe." He suggested that money be used for permanent housing of the army while "there is a lot of easy money floating around and not wait until you are skinning the budget to the bone in order to make up for past extravagance."

These statements were characterized as an unwarranted reference "to the policy approved by the head of the state, who is also his commander in chief." For them, he was removed from his command of the 8th Corps Area and ordered home. The order read "at the direction of the President of the United States."

As a result of this incident considerable criticism has been heaped on the administration in the halls of Congress. It has been pointed out that only a few weeks ago the Marine Band was ordered not to play at a women's patriotic meeting and several navy officers unceremoniously cancelled their engagements to speak at the sessions because former Secretary of the State Colby in a previous speech at their meeting had criticized the New Deal.

In other words, the question is being raised as to whether we have come to a situation where no one dare say anything against the New Deal without being punished. Senator Rush D. Holt, Democrat, of West Virginia, delivered a speech a week or so ago on the floor of the Senate severely criticizing the expenditures and the place politics has played in the allotment of WPA funds and appointments to positions. About a week later on February 21st, his brother, Matthew H. Holt, who was serving as district engineer of the WPA, received a discharge letter: "Effective today and for the good of the service, I am terminating your employment with the Works Progress Administration in West Virginia."

Fred Jarchow To Be Buried Today

Fred Jarchow, for many years a resident of Wheeling, Ill., passed away Sunday night following an operation in Walker, Minn.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at his home in Fairmont, Minn. The body was shipped here last night and burial services will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock (E.S.T.) at Northfield cemetery.

Mr. Jarchow was the father of Mrs. Edwin Decker and B. H. Jarchow of this city. Other surviving children are Mrs. A. R. Decker of Walker, Minn., and Henry Jarchow of Hoisington, Kans.

Congressman

RALPH E. CHURCH, M.C.
Washington, D.C.
March 2, 1936

To the Highland Park Press, and to the entire area which it so ably serves, go our warmest congratulations and friendliest greeting.

The past twenty-five years present a notable record of high civic hopes and notable achievement. No yardstick can measure the extent of influence of a clean, courageous and well-administered newspaper. Such influence can be the most vital force for public welfare. As your Congressman, I pay high tribute to the record of this newspaper and commend both paper and town for high vision, steady purpose and unflinching courage. As your neighbor, I express the hope that for scores of years to come both the newspaper and our community may continue to grow in strength and serving gale, a staunch example of American ideals and American principles.
