

BALLOT TAMPERING CHARGE AROUSES HIGHLAND PARKERS

Aroused by sensational charges of alleged ballot tampering involving votes cast in five Deerfield township precincts, large numbers of Highland Park voters are expected to enter the Democratic primary on April 14 to vote for the renomination of Governor Henry Horner and of Jack Baird, candidate for nomination for state's attorney.

The charges of ballot tampering in Lake county and Highland Park were brought by Mr. Baird, attorney for Russ Alford, Democrat, who was certified as county clerk last winter after the high courts of the state had declared that the certification of the re-election of Lew A. Hendee, amounted to fraud.

Mrs. Katherine Keeler, wife of the inventor of the lie-detector, and an expert on election frauds, discovered allegedly fraudulent marking on more than 100 ballots in the Deerfield precincts and in the precincts of Wauconda and Ela. She presented enlarged photographs in Lake county court to support her testimony.

Counsel for Mr. Hendee did not present any expert testimony to refute her statements. Final arguments in the case will be heard by County Judge P. L. Persons, Thursday and Friday of this week. He will then render his decision.

Observers from the Lake county League of Women Voters have been attending the court hearings.

The alleged ballot tampering took place in Deerfield precinct where Mr. Hendee gained nineteen votes not counted for him by election judges; in precinct 4 where Hendee gained twelve and Alford lost nine; in precinct 6 where Hendee gained 20 and Alford lost 4; in precinct 9 where Hendee gained thirteen and Alford lost two; and in precinct 12 where Hendee gained ten and Alford lost seven.

Mrs. Keeler testified that similarity of many of the marks used in changing the ballots made it evident that these ballots, resulting in a loss to Alford and Hendee, had been made after election officials turned the ballots over to the county clerk.

Lake county Democratic leaders are indignant over the attempts being made by Mayor Kelly and Cook county Chairman Pat Nash to nominate Justice of the Peace Henry Wallenwein for the state legislature in the eighth district in an attempt to defeat the veteran Democrat, Thomas Bolger in the fall.

Their bitter opposition to Mr. Bolger is based on his refusal to desert Governor Horner at the request of the Cook county machine. Dr. Robert R. Bosworth of Highland Park, chairman of the Lake county Horner-for-Governor club, stated:

"No part of our district is in Cook county. The Democrats of Lake county are in full accord with Governor Horner in fighting for honest election measures. The action of the Chicago bosses angers us particularly because — in their befriending the candidacy of Justice of the Peace Wallenwein — they are sponsoring a man, who was a member of the canvassing board which the high courts declared was guilty of fraud in refusing to certify the election of Mr. Alford as county clerk. After reading the court decision, it is impossible for conscientious Democrats to sponsor Wallenwein's candidacy.

"The fact that Mr. Alford was pledged to overthrow the marriage racket apparently made him unacceptable to Wallenwein, the justice of the peace. The Republican party cannot give Wallenwein to us as a present."

The History of the Dog

by Albert Butterworth

GREYHOUNDS

For many years the origin of the word 'greyhound' has been very much in dispute among historians. Some believe that it was derived from the Greek, since this animal was a great favorite among the Grecians, while others bring its origin ahead several centuries and lay it to the old Dutch gruis-hund, from gruyen, which means 'to grip.' Still another writer draws the name from the very ancient British grech or greg meaning 'dog,' and this latter is very likely the true origin of the word. No evidence is available to prove definitely that the prevailing color of the dog at that time was grey, in fact there is every reason to believe that the color in those days was sandy, sandy-red, or white and pale yellow, while other authorities still consider that the Greyhound originated in Gaul.

The very earliest records of dogs show animals of the greyhound type, and the groups were sharply defined. They were all long backed animals, somewhat high on the leg, with phenomenal muscular development, having a typical narrow head. It seems that three or four varieties of this dog existed. It is known that greyhounds were kept in the Anglo-Saxon kennel of Elfric, who was the Duke of Mercia in the eighth century or thereabouts while a magazine or paper published about 1386 showed these dogs to be of remarkable character at that time.

It is exceedingly interesting to note that the greyhound, of all the animals, has changed the least in the hundreds of years since the time when dogs could first be recognized upon the walls of excavated tombs.

In the year 1776, the Earl of Orford instituted the Swaffham Coursing Society, the members of which were limited in number to the letters of the alphabet. There being no "I" the membership stood at 25. By this society, the matched dogs according to the rules laid down of each member had to bear a name beginning with the same initial attached to the owner's name as a member of the club. After the death of the Earl of Orford, the members of the society purchased a silver trophy for twenty-five guineas, to be competed for every year. This cup was the first one to be offered to the coursing world. Following this many other clubs and societies were formed, the most important meetings of which started at Newmarket in 1805.

In 1858 the National Coursing Club was established, and a code of rules was carefully drawn up, based in part upon the laws of coursing decided upon by the Duke of Norfolk of Queen Elizabeth's reign, though prior to this the Waterloo Cup meet had been originated in 1836, so-called because the Waterloo Hotel at Liverpool was the headquarters and rendezvous for the meet. Up to 1903 there was no cup, but a monetary prize and a silver collar, but in that year a 100 pound cup, approximately five hundred dollars, was presented to the owner of the winner of the Waterloo stakes, as it was called. At the beginning, the Waterloo Cup was an eight dog stake, but it gradually worked up in the space of twenty-one years to a sixty-four dog stake, at which point it has remained. The winner receives five hundred pounds and the cup.

The small Italian greyhound is less than half the size of the English greyhound, but is perfect similar in shape and form as well as beauty. Very little appears to be known as to the development of the breed. Van Dyck, Watteau, Kneller and other painters show these small dogs in their pictures.

The whippet is a small greyhound weighing about eight pounds at the minimum and on up to twenty-five pounds in the largest of the breed, standing about eighteen or nineteen inches high. The whippet of today may be classed as greyhound, terrier, and Italian greyhound, the former and latter predominating. In a Kennel Club show in 1891 a class was given to this breed, and five entries were made and shown. (to be continued)

The John F. Jelke Co., offers housewives another new product—Good Luck Mayonnaise—with a money back offer, see advertisement in another part of this paper. Try this new innovation in mayonnaise on your next salads. Here are a couple of new salads which are exceptionally good.

Waldorf Salad Deluxe
1 1/2 cups apples, diced
1 cup celery, diced
1/2 cup dates, cut in small pieces
1/2 cup nut meats, chopped
1/2 teas. salt
1/2 cup Jelke's Good Luck mayonnaise.

Combine ingredients, blend well and chill. Serve on crisp, cold lettuce leaves. Top with Jelke's Good Luck mayonnaise and garnish with a few chopped nuts. Serves 6.

Cranberry-Pineapple Salad
2 cups pineapple juice (or water)
1/2 cup sugar
1 pkg. lemon flavored Jello
2 cups raw cranberries, ground
1-cup shredded pineapple, drained.
1/2 cup nut meats, chopped.
Bring one half of the pineapple juice (or water) to the boiling point. Dissolve the sugar and the gelatin in boiling juice. When gelatin is dissolved add the rest of the pineapple juice and allow to stand until syrupy in consistency. Add cranberries, pineapple and nuts. Pour into ring mould and allow to congeal. Unmould on crisp, cold lettuce leaves. Garnish with cottage cheese balls. Serve with Jelke's Good Luck mayonnaise. Serves 6.

SCOUTMASTERS TO MEET AT CABIN

The scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters and commissioners of the North Shore Area Council will meet at the Cabin in the Woods west of Glencoe, next Tuesday evening at 7:45. The meeting will be one to discuss the spring program of the Council as it affects the scouts of the various troops and the events in which troops participate. An important point of discussion will be the summer camping program at Camp MaKaJaWan. The meeting will be in charge of J. E. Jackson.

LIBERTYVILLE TEAM WINS FIRST AID MEET

In a hard fought contest, Troop 99 of Libertyville won first place in the North Shore Area Council First Aid Contest and the right to go to Evanston tonight (Thursday) April 9 to meet with and compete against the winning teams from Evanston, Oak Park and the Northwest Suburban Councils. Last week's meet was run under the direction of David F. Whitlaw, Council chairman of the health and safety committee. The four problems that were used were unusually hard and put a real test to the training that the teams had had. Tonight's meet will be one of very close competition, inasmuch as the teams in the meet will be those who have been selected on the same basis and in the same kind of contest as the team from Libertyville. The meet will begin at 8 p.m. at the Boy Scout headquarters on Davis Street, a half block east of Fountain Square.

The following is a list of scouts in the first aid team from Troop 99 which won the council meet: Ted Vederwerf, captain, Jim Madden, Otto Molitor, Francis Carney, Jim Kelly.

Walter Heer is scoutmaster of the troop and E. S. Faulkner of the North Shore Line.

SEMINARS ATTRACT MANY NORTH SHORE SCOUTERS

The Region Seven Seminar to which men of the North Shore Area Council are invited will be held at the North Shore Hotel in Evanston on Sunday, April 6, from 10 o'clock in the morning until 5 in the afternoon. Four national leaders will take charge of four different group discussions each of which will last throughout the entire seminar. The men from the national office who will lead the various discussion groups are: Thomas J. Keane, national director of senior scouting; Lorne Barclay, national director of the activities service of the division of program; Harvey Gordon, national camp engineer; and Charles N. Miller, assistant director of the division of operations. Mr. Keane will devote his entire time to the senior program for the older scouts of the scout troops. Mr. Barclay will discuss the various projects and demonstrate activities. Mr. Gordon will lead the group in his section in troop camping discussion while Mr. Miller will devote his attention to the local council finance program and problems.

These seminars are being held in seven different places throughout the four states of Region Seven — Illinois, Indiana and Michigan.

REGISTRATIONS FOR CAMP MA-KA-JA-WAN GROWING

Registrations for Camp MaKaJaWan indicate a full camp this summer at the North Shore Area Council camp site northeast of Antigo, Wis. Within the week following the delivery of the camp folder to scouts of the various troops, over fifty periods (two weeks each) were reserved for the 1936 season. The camp has a capacity of 400 boy periods in the six weeks it will be operating this summer. The present speed with which registrations are coming in the Council office indicates that there will not be room for the late-comers and that it will be necessary for applicants to put their name on the dotted line very soon, indicating the periods they would like to attend. A number of troops in the council are planning to go to camp this summer as a regular troop, the majority of the troop membership going to camp together and under their own leadership. The camp is divided into six smaller camps, giving troops the opportunity of doing that and remaining an independent group even at camp. Scoutmasters can work out their

STALLION AND HIS BUNCH
A wild stallion
Silhouetted against the sky,
Suddenly threw back his silvery mane
And galloped down a shadowy lane.

Below him sixteen horses shy,
For far away two figures lie.
They snorted and pawed the ground,
But the specks did not recede.

Meanwhile the stallion came pounding down,
The stallion ever alert
Had seen the quick movement of man and horse,
The commotion had come from that source.

The stallion then gave a shrill warning neigh,
Joined the bunch and galloped away.
The cowboy lost all hope
For the stallion's long gait was beyond his rope.
