Canadian Rockies Call Outdoor Enthusiasts

Two of the most democratic societies in the world, whose membership includes a former king and queen, statesmen and common folk, all on an equal footing, are the Sky-Line Trail Hikers and Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, whose outings this year promise something new in the way of scenery and energetic healthy recreation.

The Trail Riders, whose five-day trip starts from Banff Springs hotel, July 31, will wind its way between Mount Edith and Mount Norquay, follow Fortymile Creek over the Sawback Range, pass over Badger Pass, and down Johnson Creek to the spectacular canyon of the same name, and finish with a powwow and singsong near the Banff Windermere highway.

The center of activities for the Sky-Line Trail Hikers, from Aug. 7 to 10 will be Lake O'Hara. From O'Hara the hikers will make forays of adventure over the Ross Lake trail to Lake Louise; through the Naroo Lake district; along Cataract Creek to Lake McArthur and southeast through the valleys of Mounts Yukness, Hungabee and Wenchemna.

Along the routes of both treks there is splendid fishing in swift-running mountain streams, and unlimited opportunities for the camera enthusiast.

Washington, D. C., April 18.—The main topic for informal discussion in the halls of Congress is the interpretation to be made of the results of the Illinois Primary election. Naturally, both parties claim a great victory, and any number of explanations are given for the results in different sections of the state.

After one hears the different interpretations and explanations, with a great many "ifs" and "ands," he feels inclined to take the same position as the innkeeper in one of the classic novels of England invariably took when a dispute arose between his patrons and he was called upon to express his opinion. "You are both right and wrong." No one can definitely say what significance can be attached to the Illinois Primary vote, as one can truly evaluate the innumerable factors producing the result.

(I think I can be pardoned if I interject a statement here that I am deeply grateful to the people I am privileged to represent for their expression of confidence in favoring me with renomination as candidate for the office I now hold.)

That it is an election year is quite in evidence at the Government Printing Office. It is around this time of the year that Senators and members of Congress have copies of their speeches made for mailing to their respective states and districts. While the speeches are printed at the Government Printing Office, each member must personally pay the cost.

The Joint Committee on Printing intends to be prepared for the rush. I understand that to meet the anticipated demand for reprints of speeches, which now has indications of reaching unprecedented proportions, the committee will ask for bids on 39,872,000 pounds of paper with especially quick-drying qualities.

The question has often been raised as to whether such mailing of reprints of speeches delivered on the floor of the House and Senate serves a legitimate purpose. Those who extensively follow the practice contend that it represents the only adequate way that a member can present his position on governmental policies to the people he represents.

Press reports do not much more than state the "Yeas" and "Nays" on some particular bill or carry a short paragraph from a member's remarks on the floor. And, to be sure, the vote itself does not always accurately indicate the position taken. It is perfectly possible that a member will be in favor of the general principle of a particular bill he votes against but he finds that the measure is so worded or contains so many objectionable features that he cannot vote for it.

As to how a member should vote is not altogether a subject for academic discussion. It is a very real question which consciously or unconsciously comes to the mind of every member when he casts his vote for his district or state. Should he vote as he believes the majority of the people of his particular district have indicated that they wish him to vote? How is he accurately to determine the "will of the majority"? What if a great many people of his district or state have asked him to support a particular bill and he knows as a matter of fact or has good reason to believe that they are not really familiar with the contents of the bill and the possibilities in connection with it? Or should he vote in accordance with his own convictions, after a careful study of the bill, the committee testimony, committee reports and consideration to the debates? How should he vote if he has good reason to believe that a particular bill would benefit his district but would not be a good measure for the country as a whole?

Just what should be the guiding principle a member should follow in casting his vote? I am frank to say that on some occasions it can be a very perplexing question. It would be of considerable interest to me to learn how each of you would answer such questions.

NOW SCIENCE MAKES MILK
EVEN MORE DIGESTIBLE!

● For the nutritive elements it contains, milk is the most perfect of all foods. But digestion must release those elements for use in the body.

That is why many people with "delicate stomachs" are using Sofkurd. In Sofkurd, science has modified the mineral ratio of milk so that the milk "stays liquid" throughout the process of digestion; releases its food values more quickly and completely. They have produced milk that can be even more easily handled by the most delicate stomachs.

Bowman produces this milk for you. And it tastes just as fresh and rich as Bowman's regular Grade "A" Milk of Superior Flavor.

If you have had difficulty drinking all the milk you would like, ask your doctor about Bowman's Sofkurd Milk, right away. Your Bowman delivery man can supply you. Or simply call SUP. 6800.
