Former Deerfield Resident Passes On

Funeral services for Thomas Carolan, age 88 years, were held Tuesday at the Resurrection church in Chicago and interment was in St. Patrick's cemetery in West Lake Forest (Everett). Mr. Carolan was born in the log cabin on the Carolan farm north of Deerfield. His father, Patrick Carolan, came from Ireland in 1830 and reached Highland Park (Fort Clinton) in 1832 where he took up a claim of land, which he gave up later and returned to Boston where he married Margaret Coogan. They came to Deerfield in 1841 and bought land where the Carolan home still stands. Thomas Carolan married Mary Bradley of Rondout, who passed away in 1927. Their only child, a son, passed away in infancy. He left the farm when he was young and went to work in Chicago, returning to the farm at the time of his marriage about 1898. In recent years he sold his farm on Duffy road, Bannockburn, part of which was purchased by the late Adolph Goeltz. In later years he has divided his time, spending part in Pasadena, Calif., and in Florida, returning to Chicago to look after his property.

Mr. Carolan was one of the few remaining from the second generation of the original pioneers. He was a brother of Mrs. John Kehoe and the late John Carolan, Kate Carolan, and Mrs. Patrick Donahue.

This Week in Washington

by Ralph E. Church

Washington, D. C., May 30.—At this time last year a visitor to the gallery of the United States Senate would have difficulty finding a seat, particularly if a major bill should be on the floor for discussion. He would probably have to take his place at the end of a long waiting line. But today, even though the subject for debate is the controversial relief appropriation, one would experience no such difficulty. While it is sight-seeing time in Washington, there always seem to be vacant seats in the Senate gallery.

The answer briefly is that there is no one in the Senate as colorful as dramatic in debate as the late Senator Huey P. Long. I asked a group of high school students visiting in Washington last year from the District what they wanted most to see. They were practically unanimous in expressing a desire to see and hear the late Senator from Louisiana. It was not uncommon for me to telephone the Senator's office to inquire whether he planned to speak that afternoon as I had a visitor in my office from home who was anxious to hear him. Senator Long was the center of attraction even to those who disagreed with him and no one in the Senate today can take his place.

That is not to say that there are as learned men in the Senate as the late Senator Long. It is rather that there does not seem to be any one with the flare for the dramatic and the ability for repartee. There does not seem to be any one who can express a complicated issue in homely similes. There does not seem to be any one who is willing or able to speak with the fearless personal candor that characterized the speeches of Senator Long.

Yesterday the Senate Committee on Education and Labor reported a bill to repeal what is known as the "red rider" to the District of Columbia Appropriation Bill of last year. A like bill has been pending on the House Calendar.

The Congress of the United States can be likened to a city council for the District. A regular day appears on the legislative calendar for consideration of legislation pertaining to the affairs of the Nation's Capital. June 8th is the next District of Columbia Day, and if Congress remains in session until then the question of the repeal of the so-called "red rider" promises heated discussion.

When the District of Columbia Appropriation Bill was passed last year, Congressman Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, succeeded in including in it a provision to the effect that teachers in the schools who taught communism could not receive their salaries. There seems to be a wave of reaction and resentment since the enactment of that provision.

The question is: when is a teacher to be considered guilty of teaching communism? The confusion seems to arise over the distinction to be made between teaching of a factual history of Russia and advocacy of communistic doctrines. Opponents of the "red rider" state that if the children do not learn the history of the communistic movement in Russia from impartial teachers they are more than likely to receive information of a propaganda nature from partial sources, and being without sufficient factual understanding of the whole movement more likely to be easily converted to communistic principles. It is contended that as the "red rider" is worded the teachers are restrained from even mentioning Russia, with the result that the children are left in ignorance of its history.

I have at my disposal a number of Agricultural Year-books for 1935 and within the next few weeks the Year-book for 1936 will be available. Many find these volumes of real value, particularly if they are interested in the agriculture problems. As long as the supply lasts I shall be glad to send a volume to any one who may desire one. A postal card request directed to me at Washington will be sufficient to have it sent.

Wymann; treasurer, Mrs. A. E. Decker. These officers with the three Circle chairmen constitute the executive board. The Circle chairmen are Mrs. W. F. Weir, Mrs. George Pottis and Mrs. Nathan Burch.
