CREDIT WHERE CREDIT IS DUE

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

Who is doing the real work that leads America toward Recovery? During recent weeks we've heard many answers to that question. Headlines have bristled with claims and counter-claims... with reports of speeches that give the credit to political officeholders... with statements that would award the honor to the prophets of strange and unproved economic theories. But amid the thunders of oratory the true claimant is ignored. He is the man who, while politicians clamored and theorists argued, continued quietly, faithfully, effectively to do the day's work; to support himself, his family and America. He is the man—whether farmer or hired help, merchant or clerk, mechanic or engineer—who maintains and cares the fields maintained, the products of farm and factory kept moving, the wheels of industry continued to revolve. He is the man who earned and paid the taxes—direct or indirect—that kept this country a going concern and met the payroll of the political jobholders who would take the credit unto themselves. He isn't one man. He represents millions of self-reliant citizens who maintain and support and operate the homes and the farms and the workshops of America. He is the type that built America in the past, that is upholding America in the present, that will make America more glorious in the future. Individually, he is the real American. Collectively he is the Real America. Let the political and economic sophistayers continue their claims and their promises. But, meanwhile, let's give credit where credit is due.
