Young Duo Pianists to Revive Old Bach Concerto in Program

Delving into some old, musty manuscripts in the music division of the New York Public Library, Vera Brodsky and Harold Triggs, young duo-pianists, were looking for some music to play on a recent radio broadcast.

Instead, they came upon a manuscript, yellow with age, but evidently untouched for some years. It proved to be a concerto by Ferdinand Bach, son of the great Johann Sebastian, and dated back more than a century.

Photostatic copies were made; information checked; undoubtedly this concerto had never been played in this country. It will be the first introduced to a midwest audience, Brodsky and Triggs playing it in their appearance in the Winnetka Music Club Artist Recital series this fall.

Opening with a ponderous and melancholy theme, the piece assumes the ecclesiastic splendor not unlike the music of his father, and ends with the original theme.

The two piano team will also include in its program the music of several young American composers who have recently achieved recognition, Abram Chasins, Dana Suesse and Aaron Copland.

Others in this year's course at New Trier High School include Lauritz Melchior, Danish tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, later to appear as guest with the Chicago City Opera company; Marian Anderson, Negro contralto; Albert Spalding, American violinist; and Myra Hess, English pianist.

New Modern Home to Be Constructed in Heart of Chicago

A typical modern home, especially for suburbanites, is now being constructed at Michigan ave. and Roosevelt rd., by the New American Home committee under the auspices of the Federal Housing Administration.

It will be completed Labor Day and thrown open to the general public for inspection, according to A. L. Fridstein, general manager of the new home.

The modern home is expected to prove of unusual interest to residents of Chicago's suburban districts who contemplate either building or remodeling their homes in the near future.

Built of concrete and entirely fire-proof, the home will cost about $10,000. It is of two floors with six rooms, exclusive of two baths, both of which are on the upper floor.

In the New American Home the basement is eliminated, because most basements are dark and a needless expense. The heating unit and laundry are placed on the ground floor in a room known as the "utility room." This room adjoins the garage, which has space for one car in the front and room for storage or a work shop at the rear. The utility room is connected with the garage, permitting the garage to be used for drying clothes if necessary.

The kitchen is larger than the theoretical minimum in general use today with the intention of permitting use of part of this room for children's or servants' dining.

A porch shields the front door to provide shelter for the guest ringing the bell or the owner in finding his keys.

The west wall of the attractive living room is blank to give privacy from the neighboring lot and to provide space on a sufficient scale for a fireplace and book shelves. The east wall has a bay window for dining and a wide shelf in the window for plants.

The three bedrooms on the second floor are all double, so they may be rearranged for guests. Bureaus are not used as each bedroom has cases built in the walls.

The attic provides extra space, its main purpose, however, being to cool the house by means of an exhaust fan, circulating through turrets in each of the gabled ends.

The plan for the New American Home employs two rectangles, one for the main house and one for the garage, to avoid irregularities and to reduce costs.

No plaster is used in the model home. In its place various types of wall board are employed. In some cases the wall board is left natural, in other cases painted and in still others is covered with wall-paper.

The plumbing in the new home is streamlined. In one of the bathrooms the tub, lavatory and bowl are citrus yellow in color. A feature of the bathtub is that it is widened in the center and has a seat where the bather may rest and "soak his feet." The modern bowl is square and runs down to the floor like a modern bathtub.

On the entrance side, a low concrete wall is brought out to the sidewalk and is backed by a continuous line of shrubs to give privacy. In the rear there is a garden.

There's nothing like GAS for

Broiling Gas gives you the intense heat needed to brown meats so fast that loss of juices is prevented. Flavor is saved.	Roasting Gas gives you the even ventilation which produces crisp, juicy roasts. Excess moisture escapes, preventing that fat "steamed flavor."	Baking Baking requires even oven heat, and unlimited range of baking temperatures . . . for light, evenly browned cakes, pies, etc. Gas gives both!	Frying Perfect frying requires instant high heat . . . even spread of heat under the skillet . . . gives you the exact variations. Gas gives all three!	Boiling Faster! Gas brings foods to a boil in 1/2 the time or less of other fuels. More flexible, it gives you the exact shades of heat you need.
