This Week in Washington

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 19.—For more than 35 centuries it has been the inspired objective of western civilization to perfect a system of government that would give the individual citizen a high degree of personal freedom. It has been to realize a type of government that would provide justice and opportunity for the common man, that would provide the maximum of personal liberty for the exercise of initiative and effort.

Man instinctively seeks freedom. The development of the republican form of government, with intermittent periods of distress and decay, is essentially the story of the struggles and sacrifices of men to gain and attain that objective. It has only been under the leadership of free men that there has come to the individual lasting economic and spiritual values. Under republican governments men have enjoyed freedom of thought, expression and worship.

But today we have been witnessing a decay in republican governments. Pressed by distress, thinking only of the present and the immediate needs, men seek a change. Men seek a government that is swift and strong. Confused and disturbed by economic stagnation, the term "freedom" is considered only an abstract something. For the concrete gains of the moment men seem willing to sacrifice an entire heritage of moral values. It is to the present, not to the future nor to the wisdom and experience of the past, that men are giving thought.

Such has been a condition created by the ravages of the war. Such accounts for the growth of dictatorships throughout the world and the general decline in republican governments. European governments have turned virtually to their old forms.

America still stands as the model Republic. It was built new, from the ground up, and its ability to survive depends upon the manner in which the individual citizen accepts his citizenship responsibilities. It depends in large degree upon the extent to which the individual citizen permits the experience and wisdom of the past to guide him in his confusion.

The experience and wisdom of the past should serve more or less as the torch to guide us. The past should serve to confirm our faith in democracy, to prevent the necessity of a struggle to regain what would be lost should there be an adoption of the form of government which held men in bondage for centuries.

Republican governments are not new. These periods of confusion, distress and decline of such governments are recorded on the pages of history. As man instinctively seeks freedom, there are likewise recorded periods following the decay of republican governments when man strives again to create it.

From the time of the Exodus of the Hebrew from Egypt, about 1650 B.C., to the selection of Saul as King, about 1099 B.C., there existed what may be historically known as the "Hebrew Commonwealth." Moses can be said to be the first great leader who gave any attention to the common man and who gave the people a right to share in the government. Acting upon the advice of his father-in-law, Jethro, Moses gave the people the opportunity to select their own rules.

According to the Scriptures the people selected "ablemen, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness, wise men, and understanding." In other words, the people accepted and intelligently discharged their responsibility as citizens. It probably accounts for the fact that the Hebrew Commonwealth existed for five centuries.

In 1099 B. C. the first republic gave way to a dictatorship. Saul became King. History reveals many reasons for the decay of the Hebrew Republic. They are somewhat analogous to the situation today. The significant fact is that after Saul became King the old vigor and force of the people began to grow dim. It was during the period of the Hebrew Republic, which first recognized the common man, that the people made their lasting contributions to civilization.

Once again the republican form of government is declining. As to whether it will decline in America depends upon the enthusiasm with which we keep defending our individual rights under the Constitution and the extent to which we accept our responsibilities as citizens in a democracy.

Next Executive Board Meeting To Be Held At Fort Sheridan

The next meeting of the executive board of the North Shore Area council will be held at the newly dedicated Boy Scout cabin at Fort Sheridan, on a date yet to be announced. At that time the camp report will be presented and the moving pictures taken at Camp Ma-Ka-Ja-Wan by C. W. Boyle will be shown. The Order of the Arrow, the Boy Scout honorary camping society will present one of its colorful pageants at that time around a campfire on the beach. The meeting is being planned so as to have about it a camping atmosphere. It is hoped that Bob Paulson the camp chef will be present at that meeting.

New Cabin Dedicated at Post

The new cabin for the Scouts of Troop 67 at Fort Sheridan was dedicated last Monday, Sept. 7. The cabin was built with the cooperation of friends of Scouting both at the post and in several of the communities of the North Shore area. The cabin is of half round siding construction to resemble logs and is equipped with running water, gas and electricity. It will accommodate about 40 boys. Located on the beach at the foot of South circle it is an ideal set-up for the Fort Sheridan Scout headquarters. The troop will meet there every Friday night.

Major W. C. Dunckel has extended an invitation to the other troops of the area to use the cabin on three week-ends every month. A schedule will be posted and the policies pertaining to the use of the cabin will be sent to all Scoutmasters.

Scout Troop Meetings to Resume
The regular weekly troop meetings of the troops of the North Shore Area council will commence within one or two weeks. Most of the troops ceased their activities for the past two months although there were some who continued through the summer. Scouts should get in touch with their Scoutmasters for definite information. The program for the council is not yet completed but will be published to the Scout field soon.

HOME HEATING COSTS SLASHED BY CRANE ECONOMY BOILER

ARE YOU PAYING FOR HEAT YOU DON'T GET?

Are your heating bills higher than they should be? Are you shoveling dollars into your boiler to try to keep your house warm, comfortable and healthful all winter long? You don't have to if the fault is with your heating plant. And 10 to 1 it is, in cases of this kind.

An old-fashioned, worn-out boiler can burn up a lot of fuel that's never turned into heat in your home.

It's wasted on the way. And your money goes with it . . . up the flue.

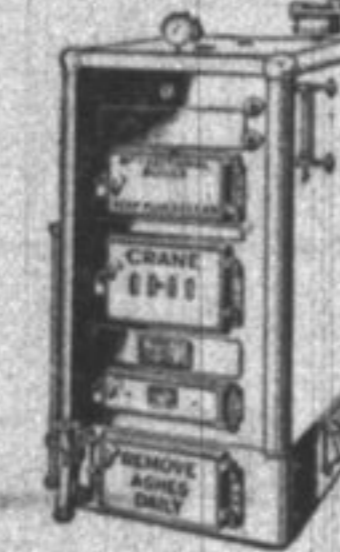

Stop such needless waste right now. You can do it for practically nothing with a Crane Boiler because in the long run it will probably save more than it costs. Owners say so!

No Money Down—3 Years to Pay

SUBSTANTIAL FUEL SAVINGS REPORTED BY HOMEOWNERS

LESS FUEL GIVES MORE HEAT

If you place your hand beside the flame of a match it will feel warm. But if you hold your hand over the flame it's hot.

That's why Crane engineers put 50% more heat-absorbing surface directly above the heating gases in a Crane Boiler than you'll find in the average boiler. Patented baffles direct the water over the hottest portion of the boiler.

More of the heat you pay for in fuel bills is carried to the rooms of your home.

"We used to have to force our boiler to heat the Winn Theater. Now with our new Crane Boiler it is very easy and we burn less fuel in doing it."

CARL L. SNIDER, Omaha
You, too, can heat better with a Crane Boiler and save money besides.

FREE Estimate

Any responsible heating contractor can tell you all about Crane comfort, convenience and economy and supply a free estimate of the cost to modernize your heating plant. Mail the coupon below for full details on Crane Heating Systems. No obligation.
