Editorial

GOOD municipal housekeeping has always been a point of civic pride with citizens of Highland Park. The people of this community have united in an effort to regulate the city and its life in an orderly fashion, and to provide whatever is necessary for comfortable community living. And on the whole they have succeeded very well. Highland Park might well serve as a model for other cities wherein the conception of good housekeeping has not progressed to such a high level.

There comes to mind the comparison between Highland Park and the little city of Beverly Hills, California. That community is an example of organization in the midst of disorder. Beverly Hills lies surrounded on four sides by the sprawling hugeness of Los Angeles — a hugeness that by its very size prevents attention to the small details which might be termed the fine points of housekeeping. And like an island in this urban sea Beverly Hills has preserved not only its governmental independence but its sense of pride in the appearance of the city, in the enforcement of the laws, in the integrity and industry of its officials.

Highland Park, while not in the physical situation of the other city, has made a like success of its municipal administration. It has become known as a good place in which to live.

However, it is well known that ceaseless vigilance is necessary to maintain a position once it has been attained. Small neglect leads to larger defection.

There are in the city numerous places, two of which have been noticed particularly, places where through carelessness or neglect or some other cause, sidewalks have been omitted from their accustomed place between the street and facing property. Instead there is an intervening expanse of stones and cinders, presenting a definite hazard to pedestrian traffic, especially at night. One of these is the west side of South Linden Avenue between Hazel and Prospect. The other is the northwest corner of Sheridan Road and Park Drive.

This is a seemingly small matter. The rest of the sidewalks in the city are no doubt in excellent condition. But it may be taken as a small indication of lack of attention to the fine points of municipal housekeeping that make Highland Park such a good place in which to live.

A Splendid Improvement

Unquestionably one of the finest street improvements to be completed anywhere in Lake County in the past decade was opened to the public last week. If you have not seen it, and you are interested in worth while civic accomplishments, drive west on Central avenue, and look over the stretch that has just been finished between Green Bay road and the old city limits, which is Sunset road.

No citizen in Highland Park will regret the loss of a few minutes of time to view this much needed western entrance to our city.

In place of the old macadam pavement that served for a quarter of a century, a forty foot modern, reinforced concrete roadway, with curb and gutter has been installed.

From either end a pleasing sight, stretching two thousand feet straight away, greets the eye. See it now before it becomes covered with snow. You'll be proud of it.

Braeside Enjoys Mexican Pictures

Mexico, in all its ancient splendor and modern picturesqueness, as shown in the movies of Don Robertson at the Braeside Parent-Teacher and Civic meeting at the Braeside School Monday night, proved a fascinating place to spend an evening. Mr. Robertson, in addition to his work as proprietor of the Hearthstone Tea Room in Hubbard Woods, has traveled in many countries and many of his pictures are taken in places the tourist is not usually allowed to photograph. He has a very pleasant way of transporting his audience into scenes he is describing, which in this case were those most worth visiting and least familiar.

About two hundred were present to enjoy the pictures, renew acquaintance with the teachers, and inspect the new addition to the school. The meeting was held in the fine new combination assembly room and play room, which has a curtained stage at one end, and with its lofty ceiling and fine architectural details, is a much appreciated asset to the school and the community. The new classrooms were also much admired. Mrs. Oweiss and her social committee, always a very hospitable one at Braeside, served refreshments. Chrysanthemums and autumn leaves were used as decorations.

The Braeside community is still small enough to be a neighborly place, although it is growing fast, and these meetings, in addition to their function as a Parent Teacher activity, provide a social and civic opportunity which fills a real need in a very pleasant way. Contributed
