Ravinia Park Will Again Be Mecca For Music Lovers

Along with the burgeoning Spring, meadow larks and house-cleaning, comes the first welcome note of announcement from the Ravinia Festival office of the plans of the Festival committee for the second season of the Summer Symphony Concerts so successfully launched last year, reopening the North Shore's lovely Ravinia Park.

That music lovers fully appreciated the opportunity to hear music again in the beautiful meadow alive with memories of the glorious past of the Ravinia Opera, maintained so long by the generosity of the late Louis Eckstein, was fully attested by the large attendance and enthusiasm last season. And it is with the deep appreciation of the committee to Mrs. Louis Eckstein, whose gift of the park made possible the opening last season and whose continued generosity permits the continuance of the festival this year, that announcement is made of a greater second season.

The amazing ease with which a small group of business men, many of them residents of the North Shore, mostly young, and all eager and more than willing to work, in a minimum of time sought and raised a guarantee fund of $35,000, engaged the Chicago Symphony orchestra and the best available conductors of the world to direct, produced a five week season of unsurpassable Symphony Concerts, and at its close returned to the surprised guarantors 75 per cent of their guarantee, is now a historic postlude to the glorious record of Ravinia Park.

Seeking a larger guarantee for the extended 1937 season, the guarantee committee headed by Howell W. Murray, announces a wide spread interest among the music lovers, resulting in excellent response to date and a splendidly representative list of guarantors.

The executive committee of the Festival Association which has been active for weeks in preparation for the gala announcement of plans for the 1937 season, remains practically the same as last year. Mr. Willoughby G. Walling is again chairman of the committee, Mr. Howard R. Will, secretary, and Mr. R. W. (Continued on page 2)
