D. A. R. BETTER FILMS REVIEW

"Park Avenue Logger." Cast: George O'Brien, Beatrice Roberts, Willard Robertson, June 10, Thursday. Interesting views of the timber country, a pleasant romance and a good deal of hand to hand fighting make this a story full of action which will appeal to men and boys. Family.

"When You're in Love." Cast: Grace Moore, Cary Grant, Alvina MacMahon, Friday, Saturday, June 11, 12. Grace Moore again charms her audience in this delightful musical comedy and Cary Grant demonstrates his rare ability as a fine comedian. The story is an interesting one, with much humor and spontaneous comedy, the stage sets are javish and the photography very fine, particularly of a rain storm in the forest. "Delightful entertainment for the entire family."

"Wakiki Wedding." Cast, Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, June 13, 14, 15. An amusing story, although somewhat trite, is acceptable as a peg on which to hang excellent entertainment of a light and appealing kind, the photography by Karl Struss deserves special mention and the natives, who largely people the cast. Except for the principal roles, are beautiful beings and born actors. Adults and young adults.

Feature No. 1 "The Crime Nobody Saw." Cast: Lew Ayres, Ruth Coleman, Eugene Pallette, Benny Baker, Wednesday, Thursday, June 16, 17. Three playwrights in search of an idea for a murder mystery, on the writing of which there is a time limit, accidentally stumble upon a real crime that spurs their flagging wits, the unusual manner in which the story is developed holds the interest despite the many improbable situations which invest all the proceedings with unreality. Adults and young adults.

Feature No. 2 "Too Many Wives." Cast: Anne Shirley, John Mosley, Gene Lockhart, Wednesday, Thursday, June 16, 17. A series of patchy ideas, unmatched for absurdity, constitute the story material of a slap stick farce in which the humor is of very poor quality. Both acting and direction are amateur. Family.

Rev. J. V. Murphy Is Planning Numerous Deerfield Activities

Rev. Father James V. Murphy who came to the Holy Cross Catholic parish in January has many fine plans for the future of his church. The beautifying of the church building is occupying his attention at present. A new roof and paint have added much to the exterior appearance of the building. The grounds are being landscaped. New memorial stained windows will add to the dignity of the interior. Building of a rectory and later a parochial school are planned for the near future, with classes opening in the fall, in a temporary location.

Father Murphy is entering into the community spirit and was the speaker at the Memorial Day exercises at the Deerfield cemetery at the program of the American Legion, Deerfield Post.

Deerfield School Nurse Gives Report

Of interest to everyone in Deerfield is the school and its activities. In April, through Supervisor James O'Connor's office, a project for a school nurse and assistant was granted. Mrs. Judith Nelson Kerrihard of Deerfield, a graduate nurse of the Evanston hospital, was appointed and her assistant, Miss Marjory Merritt of Highland Park, took up their work.

334 children were weighed and vision tested; 22 children were excluded after inspection to prevent spread of illness; 153 were treated for first aid; 275 office calls were received.

Mrs. Kerrihard's report to Superintendent Carl E. Bates also contained the following: 139 need dental attention; 61 have defective vision; 92 need throat attention.

The community is to be asked to lend its support in a summer infant clinic and for a dental clinic in the fall. Other villages the size of Deerfield are all sponsoring health measures for the future citizens of America. An audiometer will be installed in the fall.

"Like a speedboat skimming over an inland lake"

"Like a speedboat"—that is the way a new owner in Burlington, Vermont, expresses his feeling about the balanced design of the Lincoln-Zephyr car and its easy way of making all roads seem comfortable . . . Another owner, driving in the Northwest, says " . . . our longest day's drive . . . took all night as well as all day . . . no stiffness or soreness . . . as in most cars."

THE Lincoln-Zephyr is intended for people like those quoted above—sophisticated owners, appreciative owners, people who are motor-wise and critical. It is a 12-cylinder car with a V-type, 75° engine, developing 110 horsepower, and yet it can be handled as easily as though it were only a small car.

for as general motor car design tends to catch up with it, a 1937 Lincoln-Zephyr will be in the current style throughout its naturally long and useful life.

The Lincoln-Zephyr is the pioneering car—in design, in construction, even in its basic idea. Nothing is traditional. There is no chassis frame. A sweeping bridge construction overhead combines body and chassis into one all-steel unit, enormously strong. The car itself is wide because it has no running boards, only rubber buffers. The car has ample road clearance, yet you sit lower than in any other car of equal wheelbase. All seats are chair-high, with back angles like chairs and room to put your feet down straight.

Without obligation or formality, make arrangements with any Lincoln-Zephyr dealer to drive this car yourself. Try it on hills, on curves, on rough dirt roads—in places you know well in other cars. Above all, try it on a continuous trip of 100 miles; then you can finally judge it by the absence of driving fatigue. Call a nearby Lincoln-Zephyr dealer this very day, if possible.

In appearance, the Lincoln-Zephyr is a thing of beauty in the eyes of both artist and engineer. The car is conceived as a unit of transportation of this day and age.

"You sit as comfortably in a Lincoln-Zephyr as in a chair at your club"

It is in a very true sense the car of the future.
